Pope met by million

One-third of Ireland jams park

DUBLIN (AP) — Pope John Paul, beckoned by "the voice of the Irish calling to me," opened a pastoral tour of this island of faith and bloody strife by celebrating mass today before an estimated at more than one million worshippers on the vast green of Dublin's Phoenix Park. (Additional story, picture on page 14.)

It was the largest gathering in Irish history — equal to one-third of the country's total population.

"You come as a messenger of peace to a troubled land," Cardinal Tomas Cardinal O Fiaich of Ireland told the pontiff on his arrival from Rome.

The Pope himslf made an impassioned appeal for peace in Northern Ireland.

"On my knees, I beg you to turn away from the paths of violence," the pontiff pleaded of terrorists on both sides of Ireland's sectarian divide.

The speech, prepared for delivery in Drogheda, was his strongest statement yet on Northern Ireland and the sectarian hatreds that have plagued Ireland for centuries.

In his speech, the Pope spoke particularly to Northern Protestants hostile to his visit.

"May no Irish Protestant think that the Pope is an enemy, a danger or a threat," he said. "My desire is that instead Protestants would see in me a friend and a brother in Christ."

"I appeal to young people who may have become caught up in organizations engaged in violence. I say to you, with all the love I have for you, with all the trust I have in young people: do not listen to voices which speak the language of hatred, revenge, retaliation."

On the flight from Rome, the Pope was asked whether he might, as Protestant leaders in Northern Ireland demand, excommunicate Irish Republican Army terrorists from the church.

In his homily in Dublin, delivered in English under bright, clear skies as he stood before a 37-metre steel cross painted in the Vatican's yellow and white colors, he described himself as a pilgrim with a message of peace, and told the multitude he was "living a moment of tense emotion.

"Like St. Patrick, I too have heard the voice of the Irish calling to me, and so I have come to you," he said.

The sermon was primarily a tribute to the "inviolable and unbreakable" loyalty of Irish Catholics to the church in Rome, and an appeal to them to meet the challenge of "pervading materialism."

"You Irish Catholics have kept and loved the unity and peace of the Catholic Church, treasuring it above all earthly treasure," he said.

He called himself "a pilgrim for Christ to the land from which so many pilgrims for Christ . . . went out over Europe, the Americas, Australia, Africa, Asia."

The 59-year-old John Paul, who will leave Ireland Monday to begin a week-long tour of the United States, is the first pope ever to visit this overwhelmingly Catholic country.

$2 oil hike next week?

KUWAIT (AP) — A Kuwait newspaper says Arab oil producers on the Persian Gulf will raise petroleum prices next week by an average of 10 per cent, adding about $2 to current levels.

The daily Al Siyassa cited unnamed industry sources, who also said the price for spot sales was up sharply in European and Japanese markets, reaching $35 U.S. a barrel for heavy crude oil and $45 U.S. a barrel for light crude.

Members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, including the Persian Gulf Arab states, in June raised the base price of crude oil from $14.55 to as high as $18 a barrel, depending on the quality.

The paper said the producers decided to raise prices again because of diminishing Iranian production and the failure of the major oil importing countries to adopt efficient energy conservation measures.

The June decision by OPEC allowed individual producers to add surcharges and differentials to raise prices to a ceiling of $23.50 a barrel. The increase is to be in effect until the end of the year.

It was not immediately clear if the latest reported price rise includes Saudi Arabia, the world's largest petroleum exporter which supplies the U.S. with 20 per cent of its imported oil.

'He was best mailman in all of Canada'

By DEREK SIDENIUS

As a mailman, Dave Slater was in a class all by himself.

Ask his fellow workers at Station B.

Ask the residents of Joan Crescent, Craigdarroch and Rockland to whom he delivered the mail over the past 22 years.

"He was the best mailman in all of Canada," claims Mabel Snowden, 1385 Craigdarroch.

There are few around who'd disagree.

On Friday Slater, 61, hung up his mailbag for the last time, ending a 33½-year career with the post office.

Normally such events go unnoticed in the community.

But if you thought that would happen in Slater's case, you obviously don't know his former customers . . . or Slater.

The folks Slater served wanted to do something special for him and so on Friday night 24 of them gathered at the home of Sylvia Lyle, 960 Joan Crescent, for a surprise party in his honor.

They presented him with a watch and a framed dedication made by Donald Harvey which read: "Dave Slater: We would like to thank you for the many years of dedicated service. We thank you too for your ever-present good cheer. We wish you and Mrs. Slater a long and happy life."

To his many customers Slater was more than postman — he was a friend, almost a member of the family.

"Most people wait for the mail to come," said Roy Temple of 1007 Joan Crescent. "But we'd wait for the mailman."

Slater stopped and talked to everybody as he went on his rounds. He knew the young and the old. He laughed with them and at times cried with them.

It was perhaps the little things he did that won him such wide respect.

Mrs. Lyle recalls one day she was struggling with a heavy machine aeriating her lawn when Dave passed by. He doffed his cap, dropped his mailbag and spent half an hour finishing the job for her.

Slater saw him. "You shouldn't be doing that," he said and taking off his coat, went up the tree and sawed off the limb.

One time a relief carrier was on the route when an elderly lady came out of her house.

"Oh, I guess you'll do then," she said and turned her back for the startled carrier to zip up her dress.

"Dave had the sense of the real, original Everyman," said long-time customer Don Harvey of 1025 Joan. "He was something we'd all love to be.

"It wasn't what he did so much as that he did it so damn well."

"He was the epitome of what a postman should be."

Rebel dentist faces the boot

VANCOUVER (CP) — The council of the College of Dental Surgeons of British Columbia has voted to hold a court of inquiry to determine if its rebel treasurer has committed unethical, infamous or unprofessional acts.

The motion came during a regular council meeting Friday after Dr. Murray Bloom refused to resign as treasurer or submit to a referendum of the membership.

During the stormy meeting at a local hotel shouting could be heard from behind the closed doors.

In an interview after the meeting, Bloom said he plans to take the council to court to get a decision supporting his interpretation of a section of the Dentistry Act outlining the treasurer's duties.

Bloom, who has been a vocal critic of payments made to the college's elected officials, said he refused to resign after a majority vote by the 27-member council because he has the support of the college membership.

Reading from a council statement, college president Dr. Ted Ramage said a major portion of the meeting was devoted to a review of Bloom's actions including his recent airing of college business in the media.

"Motions of censure were received from the (college's) component societies condemning his actions in bypassing the regular processes of the college council and impairing the behavior of council members and staff," Ramage said.

He said the council has asked its lawyer to draft revisions of the Dentistry Act to allow impeachment of any council member.

The controversy began last month when Bloom said he was being ostracized by other members of the college executive because of information he gleaned from the organization's books about what he considers to be questionable payments to elected officials.

He says a past president of the college received almost $100,000 for about two years' work, a figure he feels is excessive.

Castro levels blast at Carter

Times News Services

As President Carter prepares to address the American people on the thorny subject of Soviet troops in Cuba, the United States faced a scathing verbal attack from Havana and Moscow for its handling of the crisis.

Cuban President Fidel Castro accused President Carter of being "dishonest, immoral and insincere" and claimed he has created "an artificial crisis" over the presence of Soviet troops in Cuba, the Cuban news agency reported.

And a top Soviet official indicated the crisis had raised so "many doubts" about the Carter administration that Moscow was approaching a point where it may no longer be able to work with the White House on major international issues.

The Soviet troops are part of a "military instruction centre installed in Cuba 17 years ago, and both the CIA and former U.S. administrations knew it," Castro declared Friday in his first public rebuttal to U.S. criticism of the stationing of Soviet combat troops on the Caribbean island.

"What you call a brigade, which we call a training centre, has been in Cuba for the past 17 years," Castro insisted at a news conference in Havana.

"That military facility was established at the end of the October crisis in 1962 in conformity with the spirit of the agreement signed that year.

"This facility was known and is known by all the presidents who have gone through the United States. This facility was known to the CIA. This facility was known by President Kennedy. This facility was known by President Johnson. This facility was known by President Nixon and by President Ford. And President Carter had to necessarily know about it," Castro was quoted as saying.

It was "no secret whatsoever," the Cuban leader said.

"Why is this being brought up now, creating an artificial crisis? Carter has to answer this . . . and the fact that he is in a crisis does not give him the right to put world peace in a crisis," Castro said in an apparent reference to Carter's political troubles at home.

In an exclusive interview with The Washington Post in Moscow, Georgi Arbatov, alternate member of the Soviet Central Committee and adviser to President Leonid Brezhnev, made it clear the Soviet Union has no inclination to make any move of its own that would resolve the "fabricated issue" of Soviet combat troops in Cuba.

Arbatov gave the interview on grounds that he be quoted solely as head of Moscow's Institute on the U.S.A. and Canada, the main American affairs think-tank, and not as a government official. However, it is unlikely that Arbatov could speak independently given the nature of the Soviet system.

Meanwhile, Carter was meeting with his aides today and working on Monday's address to the country on his attempts to get the Soviet Union to "end the combat capability" of its brigade in Cuba.

It is an address that could weigh heavily on the fate of the strategic arms limitation treaty now before the Senate.

Female stereotype ad ban eyed

OTTAWA (UPC) — The government may introduce regulations forcing the advertising industry to end the stereotyping of a woman as a "delicate, fragile creature in high heels and a low-cut dress," Secretary of State David MacDonald said Friday.

MacDonald has ordered the Canadian Radio-Television and Telecommunications Commission to launch a six-month, $100,000-task force to draw up guidelines for a more positive portrayal of women in radio programming and commercials.

The 10-member task force will be made up of representatives from the advertising and broadcast industries, from the public, the CRTC and women's activist groups.

It will hold hearings in Ottawa and across the country and have the option to set up voluntary guidelines for the industry, CRTC regulations or government-enforced regulations.

"I hate to predict or prejudge what the task force will recommend. So I will leave it up to them," MacDonald told a news conference. "If necessary the government will introduce legislation," he said later.

MacDonald said advertisers were helping to "perpetuate a vicious circle" by reflecting only the stereotypes.

"The circle has to end somewhere, and if the advertisers are not responsible for the stereotypes of women that exist today, they are responsbile to a large extent for the perpetuation of those stereotypes," he said.

"Women shouldn't be used as sexual objects to sell products and be portrayed as a delicate and fragile creature in high heels and a low-cut dress," he told a meeting of members of the Institute of Canadian Advertising.

Marianne Barrie of St. Thomas, Ont., a part-time member of the CRTC, will be chairman of the task force that was set up less than two months after MacDonald abolished a $300,000-study of stereotyping in the media lead by former Liberal Communications Minister Jeanne Sauve.

"What we don't need is more studies on this," MacDonald said. "There have already been more than 60 studies showing that women seem to be more interested in cleaning or cleaning themselves."

Carter, labor draft new 'austerity' plan

WASHNGTON (UPI) — The administration Friday announced new anti-inflation guidelines which will allow many companies to raise prices, and reached agreement with organized labor on an advisory committee to recommend wage levels.

President Jimmy Carter and the 35-member Executive Council of the AFL-CIO jointly announced a broad economic "accord," calling for "a period of austerity" for all Americans, which will involve restraints on the rise of both wages and prices.

The president announced creation of an advisory panel — comprising five labor, five business and five public members — to recommend a new wage increase guideline for the second year of the administration's voluntary wage-price program.

It will be headed by John Dunlop, Harvard professor, labor secretary under President Gerald Ford and head of a pay board during the Nixon administration.

The panel will report by Oct. 31. Meanwhile, the 7 per cent wage increase standard in effect during the past year will remain in effect as the second year of the program begins Monday.

The Council on Wage and Price Stability announced new price guidelines which will go into effect Monday.

Uranium mining seen safe

VANCOUVER (CP) — The managing director of the Mining Association of British Columbia said Friday uranium can be mined in the province without causing permanent harm to the environment, the general population or the mine workers.

Bob Matthew told the Vancouver board of trade that uranium mining should be allowed because there is a need for uranium as an energy source.

He said uranium mining can provide jobs, earn foreign currency and create revenue for government and social programs.

Canada currently produces one-fifth of the world's uranium, he said, adding it can be mined safely if properly regulated.

Open-pit pact best

PRINCETON (CP) — Workers at the Newmont copper mine near this southern Interior community ratified a new collective agreement giving them average wage increases of 30 per cent in two years.

Peter Cameron, regional vice-president of the Canadian Association of Industrial, Mechanical and Allied Workers, said the pact for the 240 workers was the best over-all contract among British Columbia open-pit metal mines.

Journeyman's rate will be increased by $2.61 an hour or 29 per cent, while base rate will increase by $2.29 or 33 per cent. At expiry, the tradesman's rate will be $11.65 and the base rate $9.18.

Another study on breakwater

Sidney will seek funds for yet another — the fifth — breakwater study following a report that a proposal for a 1,000-berth marina at the foot of Beacon Avenue might create problems for the town.

Ald. Gordon Martman told council the new study should determine the size of the breakwater, its location, the flushing action and the type of seawall needed.

C. Saanich to study pollution

A committee has been appointed by Central Saanich Ratepayers' Association to study growing pollution problems in the municipality.

One of the problems is the overflow of sewage from Hagan Road pumping station into Slugget Creek.

Residents have complained the pump is inadequate to cope with the needs of the growing population and has no auxiliary generator in the event of a power failure.

No wrongdoing seen in phoney-letter probe

Socred caucus chairman Jack Kempf, who initiated an investigation into allegations caucus staff are telling party members "dirty trick" ways to manipulate the media, now says he is satisfied there has never been any wrongdoing.

In an interview Friday, the Omineca MLA said he'll ask a few more questions of Esquimalt party members but added: "There will be no deep, dark investigation."

And Jack Kelly, the chief researcher for the Social Credit caucus who is under fire for allegedly suggesting false names be used on politically-partisan letters to newspapers, Friday categorically denied he ever used the practice himself.

Kelly said that since January, 1976, when he joined the research staff of the caucus neither he nor any other researcher used a fictitious name on a letter to the editor.

All political parties help the local constituencies draft letters, but they are always inserted over the name of a constituency member who gives assent for his name to be used.

At a meeting of the Esquimalt-Port Renfrew Social Credit constituency last week Kelly and other caucus researchers told the members how to write effective letters and offered the researchers' assistance in drafting them if they wanted.

But Kelly says he told the meeting that it is preferable for party faithful to draft their own letters.

Sources who attended the meeting told the Times that Kelly's suggestion that false names be used came in reqponse to a questioner from the floor who wanted to know where he could find names to use on letters.

Kelly told him to use the phone book and change an initial, sources say, but immediately told the gathering he doesn't advocate that practice.

Kempf said as deputy caucus chairman for two years and chairman since June, he worked closely with researchers and never saw any hint of falsified names used on letters.

Both Kelly and Kempf say nothing illegal like forging names was ever done.

The researchers media manipulation presentation came on the heels of a letter from Premier Bill Bennett in August last year to all MLAs that the NDP were knocking the stuffing out of the Socreds when it came to dealing with local communities.

Some areas were doing a good job, the premier wrote, "but for most areas, the opposition (particularly the NDP) are simply outhustling us in the garnering of media coverage for their party stance."

Kelly has been on a forced week's vacation to give Kempf a chance to look into the situation.

Bennett later said he doesn't condemn using fake names and said the party doesn't try to manipulate the press.

The Times received at least one fake letter last March before the May 22 provincial election.

The letter was signed with the name of a well-known NDP supporter and purported to announce his conversion to Social Credit. Gordon Townsend of Victoria said in an interview it made him angry.

In August, the Vancouver Sun received a letter welcoming the news that Kathleen Ruff, appointed as B.C. human rights director by the NDP, was resigning her position. Jane Hudson, whose name was signed to the letter, denied she had ever written it.

Ernie Hall, NDP MLA, said Friday his party wants Attorney-General Garde Gardom to investigate the legality of using someone else's name, or false names, on letters to the editor. Gardom has already said it may be immoral but as far as he knows, it's not illegal.

Plane hitch-hiker given probation

PENTICTON (CP) — A more conventional mode of travel has been decided on by a 23-year-old Montreal man after an appearance in provincial court Friday for hitch-hiking on an airport runway.

Anthony Adam Burgess was given a suspended sentenced and placed on six months probation after he pleaded guilty to entering a restricted area.

Burgess was charged under the Aeronautics Act after he walked into the path of a private plane which was preparing to take off on Tuesday and asked the Vancouver-bound pilot for a ride to Calgary.

Burgess told the court that his travel plans had been altered to include a bus ride to Vancouver and a commercial flight home to Montreal.

Royal gives up

VANCOUVER (CP) — Royal Insurance Company, complaining of unfair competition from government-owned Insurance Company of British Columbia, has told its agents in the province not to accept new business and to hold back on renewals.

Vancouver branch manager F. J. King says in a letter sent to other branch managers it is "obvious" that free enterprise insurance companies face a no-win situation in B.C. and the government firm plans to force out any competition.

He says the government company manipulates funds to give it an overwhelming advantage.

Royal Insurance was the first private company to sell automobile insurance after the provincial government approved competition with ICBC.

McKitka trial date set

SURREY (CP) — Former Mayor Ed McKitka will go to trial Jan. 7 in British Columbia Supreme Court to face 17 charges including fraud and theft.

The charges against McKitka and several other businessmen stem from a two-year RCMP investigation into land dealings in several Vancouver area municipalities.

A Canadian merchant marine

Earlier this year, the former Liberal transport ninister, Otto Lang rejected the idea of the federal government attempting to stimulate the creation of a Canadian merchant marine. Lang said the government would retain its policy of relying almost exclusively on foreign fleets to transport export goods to world markets because the alternative was too expensive.

The present Tory government should immediately review the shipping policy it inherited.

Three times since Confederation Canada has boasted a viable merchant marine, and three times the bulk of the fleet has landed on the rocks primarily because Canadian owners did not keep pace with shipping technology. Today there are fewer than 200 Canadian-owned deapsea ships.

In comparison to other countries, Canada's merchant marine fleet is practically negligible. As of January 1978, the U.S. had 840 vessels over 1,000 gross tons. The Soviet Union had 2,456, the United Kingdom 1,377, Japan 1,846 and the flag of convience nations, thousands more.

Canada's economic well being depends heavily on exports, yet $3 billion are spent every year to hire foreign carriers. In light of our $7 billion current account deficit, Canada could well afford to consider seriously creating the proper climate to rejuvenate its shipping industry.

In recent weeks the Clark government has paid much lip service to tax incentives for industrial development. Canada, with borders on three oceans and one of the world's longest coastlines, has tremendous potential for serious involvement in maritime research and development.

Statistics Canada estimates that Canadian shipyards employ approximately 14,000 people. That might seem like a sizable workforce, but its is a drop in the bucket compared to what is possible.

The Canadian Shipbuilding and Ship Repairing Association reports that while the dollar value of vessels under construction is slightly better than last year, the gross tonnage is 35 per cent less. The decline results from less orders for multi-purpose cargo and steel cargo vessels. Fortunately the country's shipyards are being sustained with construction of smaller vessels and repair work.

The Clark government need only look as far as the United States for ideas on how to stimulate both a merchant marine and the spin-off benefits of a labor intensive onshore industry. The U.S. is working on legislation that would see it enter bilateral agreements with trading partners whereby each country would get 40 per cent of their mutual shipping.

The U.S. government has also embarked on a subsidy plan to stimulate its dwindling ship building industry. Under the scheme the government pays the difference between having a vessel built in the U.S. and a foreign country.

The first agreement signed under the plan calls for five 36,000 gross ton bulk cargo ships to be built in a Texas shipyard. The ships will cost $200 million dollars — equal to the value of all the new ship construction in Canada in the first six months of this year.

There will be drastic changes in the world's shipping fleets in years to come. Already many fleets are cutting the speeds of ships by a third to conserve energy.

The door is open for the development of marine technology make better use of fossil fuels and to initiate the use of renewable forms of energy, such as wind. And as resources are developed in Canada's north, the door will also open for modern ships that will cope with special conditions presented by the Arctic.

The Clark government cannot ignore the benefits that could accrue from the construction, maintenance and operation of a Canadian merchant marine.

A bigger fish war

By WILLIAM ROSS

The so-called "tuna war" between Canada and the United States is not a major confrontation between the two countries but simply part of the ongoing negotiations over fisheries management and allocation.

The present issue over tuna stems from the fact that Canada has recently extended its ocean fisheries jurisdiction to a 322-km (200-mile) economic zone. Canada claims the sole right to regulate and exploit all fish species which enter the Canadian zone.

The albacore tuna is a migratory species. It does not reside permanently in the Canadian zone. The United States claims that since American fishermen traditionally have followed the tuna throughout their migratory route along the west coast of North America they have a right to fish for tuna in Canadian waters. The United States does not recognize Canadian claims to regulation of migratory species in its economic zone.

Not isolated issue

After the summer's controversy, meetings have been held, but the problem has yet to be resolved.

The reason that no solution has been found is that the tuna dispute is not an isolated issue. Its resolution depends on compromise solutions to other fisheries problems. For example, Canadian fishermen have been upset over the allocation of salmon that originate in the Fraser River. Both countries have been upset with the number of salmon caught by one country during its migration home to rivers in the other country. Both are concerned with the salmon caught by the fishing fleets of distant water nations. There has also been considerable dispute over the rights of both Canadian and American fishermen to troll for salmon in each other's waters. Finally, Canadian fishermen were unable to take their share of halibut this year in the Gulf of Alaska because of overfishing by Americans. All of these issues have created much mistrust between the two countries.

Related to this mistrust and a central, yet hidden, issue is the relationship between tuna and herring. Canada is disturbed by U.S. moves to open an experimental herring fishery off the Washington coast. Herring migrate like tuna. They live primarily in Canadian waters and in the northern part of the United States' economic zone. Unlike tuna, herring are traditionally fished by Canadians, not Americans. These experimental programs, if instituted, would threaten the herring roe industry in British Columbia.

Problems magnified

While the assorted fisheries issues are long standing, they have become magnified and more urgent because of the new economic zones of Canada and the United States. Tuna is really not the issue. Canada would probably agree to let Americans fish for tuna under licence if, in return, concessions were made in fishery negotiations between the two countries.

The primary goal is to get the Americans to abstain from commencing a herring fishery. Secondary goals include securing a fair share of halibut and a larger share of the salmon catch.

Whatever the outcome of the so-called "tuna war," it is unlikely that old friends playing a new game will resolve all of the fishery issues which have been the subject of repeated disputes for much of this century.

Humor comes a-riding

OTTAWA — The indication that Canada is safe for another century comes not from Quebec but with the amazing revelation that Alberta actually may have a sense of humor after all.

The news that a small Alberta radio station has established an "Ontario Heritage Trust Fund" offers the greatest relief to constitution-watchers since Eugene Forsey wrote his last letter-to-the-editor.

Until this news, we were all under the assumption that the last time anyone in Alberta laughed he became an automatic entry in the Guinness Book of Records.

As a matter of fact, the only province as humorless as Alberta is Ontario.

Problems enough

We've enough problems with the tight-lipped Presbyterian ancestry of our bankers and civil servants without the two richest provinces now intent in a war on laughter.

Saskatchewan, even with the Depression blues, could produce the wit of Tommy Douglas. British Columbia is populated by goofy cults and political one-liners. Newfoundland, the poorest province, also has the best sense of humor. Our only fear is that the reputed offshore oil finds may make it as grim as New Hampshire.

You simply have to have a supply of humor to live in the Maritimes, because anyone who can regard the Bricklin adventure or the saga of the heavy water plant without doubling over probably needs his head read anyway.

The sudden advent of someone in Alberta who can take the air out of Ontario is highly propitious, as some of the sanctimonious twaddle coming out of Premier Davis lately is a bit much to take, considering the track record.

That Ontario, worried about rising energy costs, has latterly discovered that we must all be brethren and share the riches brings rolling eyeballs to all of western Canada.

The proof that humor is mostly sublime was contained in the country's largest newspaper on Thursday when the Toronto Star's screaming red headline warned: "Now Alberta Has Plan to Grab Our Industries."

The ire of The Star comes over the fact that Alberta's new economic development minister, Hugh Planche, announced he is considering offering Ontario companies special cheap rates on energy if they move their businesses to his province.

$5 billion in a jam jar

The Star was perturbed because it was Mr. Planche's first remark as minister and overseer of the "controversial" Alberta Heritage Trust Fund, which has now socked away $5 billion in a jam jar on the back forty as a hedge on the day when Alberta's non-renewable oil and gas run out.

Best of all, though, is the sly humorist in the Star newsdesk who tucked that delightful "our" into the headline.

The rest of Canada, grown tired over the years of whining about the tariff-protected industrial base of central Canada that viewed the boondocks of the nation as merely an extension of Eaton's catalogue, will cherish Ontario's plaintive cry that "our industries" are now under threat from the Visigoths of the plains.

When an anthology of Canadian humor is printed some years down the road, we trust it will include both the Alberta radio station's charitable offer and that choice headline.

Jubilee meeting a first step toward harmony

The nurse in the corridor of the Memorial Pavilion of the Royal Jubilee Hospital was wearing a crisp, starched white uniform and looking very professional.

Where, she was asked, would one find the first-ever public meeting of the hospital board?

"In the smallest room in the building," she answered, pointing down a long corridor that smelled of antiseptic. "Where else?"

The morale of the staff is definitely one of the problems at the Jubilee.

In fact the room, relatively bright and unhospital-like despite the pale green walls, was jammed full for the meeting. The crowd included a few local politicos (Victoria MLA Charles Barber, Esquimalt alderman Colin Blair), a number of Jubilee doctors (including Scott Wallace), several nurses and other staff members, and even a few patients.

It was definitely a crowd biased in favor of change at the Jubilee, and it showed that bias by clapping and booing board members' statements throughout the evening, in spite of requests from acting chairman Eric Simmons for order.

The board had met over dinner before the public meeting, supposedly to decide how best to handle this first head-on meeting with the press and public present. Whoever had made those decisions had generally made them well.

The key item on the agenda — last week's motion by the medical staff stating it had no confidence in board chairman Terry Prentice — was handled openly, tactfully and responsibly by Simmons, by medical chief of staff Dr. Elinor Powell, and by the board as a whole.

A half-hour question period was set up when the visiting public could ask the board anything they wanted about hospital operation.

The board agreed that the general nature of the items to be discussed at a later closed meeting of the board could be made public.

If an objection was to be found, it would be only that some of those items — the hospital's computer system, the question of whether board members appointed by Victoria council should have to answer to council — didn't really seem to need to be dealt with behind closed doors. However, the board as a whole will be setting up procedures to decide which items should be debated in camera, so this problem may soon disappear.

It is somehow ironic that the only truly contentious item on the agenda — the motion of non-confidence in Prentice — was one that might never have arisen if the board had started meeting in public a long time ago.

In presenting the motion, Dr. Powell talked repeatedly of the "isolation" that has grown up between the board and the medical staff during the past few months — isolation that public meetings would surely have done something to ease.

The board agreed that the question should be postponed for a month until Prentice had returned from holidays. This seems a sensible decision — not only would it be unfair to condemn a man in his absence, but it would also be better to have a full debate on the philosophic differences between Prentice and the doctors that have caused the rift between them.

It must be noteworthy, however, that not one board member rallied to Prentice's defence in his absence. They spoke of the need for him to be present during the debate, they mentioned his wide knowledge of hospital affairs, his good intentions and his hard work, but no one suggested that the attitude he has taken with the doctors is the right one.

The rest of the meeting should have been an educational experience for the visiting public. The agenda clearly showed the wide range of projects and problems with which the hospital board must grapple — a range almost as large as that of a school board or village council. Tuberculin tests for employees, building programs, typewriter replacements, and blood bank shortages were just a few of the items that needed action.

It may take a long time for the distrust and suspicion that has grown up around the Jubilee during the past few months to end. The isolation that the medical staff and other staff have come to feel will not disappear overnight.

However, a series of open, public meetings as responsibly handled as the one this week will be the first step in overcoming those feelings and building again a proper team for managing the Jubilee.

'The fanatic heroine' launched a revolution

The Margaret Sanger Centennial year has begun rather quietly, especially for as catalytic an agent of change as the woman who invented the very term, Birth Control. As H.G. Wells once wrote, "When the history of our civilization is written, it will be a biological history, and Margaret Sanger will be its heroine."

It was her intense commitment and energy which almost single-handedly promoted contraception in the U.S. — something which wasn't fully legalized until 1972.

Still it's hard to pin a nice unequivocal label like "Heroine" on the lady, even as a 100th birthday gift. Her history is a whole lot more complex than that.

Sanger was born one of 11 children to an Irish immigrant freethinker who sculpted gravestone angels. She began her career as a public health nurse on Manhattan's lower east side, where she became convinced that the solution to poverty was birth control.

In 1914, when Sanger was on the lam in London — she had broken the pornography laws by distributing birth-control information — she became an admirer of Havelock Ellis. Ellis was one of the more prominent eugenicists of the period who applied (or misapplied) Darwinian notions to a creepy philosophy of selective breeding. He wanted only the "best people" to reproduce.

Under his influence, Sanger penned one of her early and least attractive slogans, "Birth control — to create a race of thoroughbreds." Shades of the Third Reich. In fairness, Sanger didn't advocate birth control out of a desire to breed a super race, but made an alliance with eugenics out of a desire to push birth control. It was her one and only cause.

She came to believe contraception was a panacea. It would not only control poverty, end child labor and improve health but also give women "the key to the temple of liberty." Birth control would allow them to plan their lives without sacrificing their sexuality.

Despite her own support of what she saw as women's liberty, Sanger was hardly a favorite with the feminists of her era. Most of them looked at her rather ecstatic views on sex — a "psychic and spiritual avenue of expression" — with a jaundiced eye.

Suffragist Carrie Chapman Catt chided that "merely to make indulgence safe does not do enough." She and others were in favor of restraining male sexuality instead of freeing female sexuality.

Charlotte Perkins Gilman was disinterested in birth control because she thought that in an ideal feminist society — like the one she described in "Herland" — the energy of adults would and should be directed toward child-raising, not sex.

Still others, including many of the progessives, were sure that Sanger had the whole thing backwards. She thought that large families were responsible for the evils of the system and that a wife could control the entire organization of society with a diaphragm. But the progressives thought the birth-control issue came in second at best to the issue of social reform.

By the 1920s and 1930s, birth control was overwhelmingly adopted by the middle class, not the poor. It was not accepted as a solution to economic injustice, but as part of the "sexual revolution" of the post-World War I period.

At that time the ideal of middle-class womanhood switched to the vision of a wife primarily as a companion and sexual partner, not mother. This was an overwhelming social change. For the first time, the credo, as author Sheila Rothman describes it, was marriage "based on passion, sexuality and, of course, birth control."

Margaret Sanger is not the first flawed "heroine" to facilitate a vast social change. Contraception, for all of its failures and problems, has enabled millions and millions of women as well as men to plan their lives as well as the size of their families.

But the most profound effect of the availability of birth control has been on the ability to separate sex from reproduction. This revolutionary fact has been accepted by most of us with relief or joy or unease. The way we feel about the separation often underlies the attitudes we have toward the second sexual revolution — from extra-marital sex to The Joy of Sex, to the availability of abortion.

In that sense, this most fanatic and controversial woman was prophetic when she said that birth control demands "the frankest and most unflinching reexamination of sex in relation to human nature and the bases of human society." One hundred years later, this reexamination still goes on.

'How I stopped worrying and learned to love the bomb'

By EVAN MAXWELL

EXTRA
MADISON PRESS CONNECTION
A citizen writes to a senator

EDITOR Ron McCrea with special edition of the Madison Press Connection which carried diagram and the complete text of a controversial letter the U.S. government says contains secret information about the hydrogen bomb. Letter was written by Charles Hansen.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. — Charles R. Hansen, who wrote the letter that may or may not have revealed the secrets of the hydrogen bomb, considers himself a true child of the Atomic Age. As a schoolboy in Seattle, he was deeply frightened by air raid drills in which he had to hide under his desk.

But were it not for nuclear weapons, he says, he might never have been born. "My father was aboard a troop ship headed for the invasion of Japan when the first bomb was dropped on Hiroshima," Hansen said the other day in an interview in his Mountain View condominium. "Had it not been for the atomic bomb, dad would probably have died on the beach, and I would never have been around."

The federal government says that Hansen's letter disclosed some of the most closely guarded secrets of the bomb. After it was published last week, the government abandoned its attempt to bar the Progressive magazine from publishing another H-bomb article.

The Hansen letter was written to Republican senator Charles Percy of Illinois in support of the Progressive's fight against the government. It has been hailed as a blow for the First Amendment and has been castigated as an irresponsible invitation to nuclear proliferation.

Hansen, a computer programmer in Sunnyvale, Calif., and an amateur military historian, is surprised and a bit amused by both characterizations. He himself says the letter is a "rather vague, probably incorrect discussion of some principles of applied physics." It was compiled from public sources, was written in two sittings at his kitchen table and was, he says, "shot through with guesswork, not at all up to my usual standards of scholarship."

But several weeks after Hansen sent a copy of his letter to the Department of Energy, the department classified it as a national secret and got a court order to prevent its publication. That action left Hansen momentarily speechless and has generated a controversy that is still not resolved.

The government has claimed that Hansen's research could save a budding nuclear power "several years," perhaps as many as seven, of research in building a hydrogen bomb. Hansen claims that the true savings to such a power would be "several hours, perhaps a day." Some physicists have said, however, that the letter contains major errors.

Hansen says he resents the implication that he is somehow irresponsible in blithely issuing invitations to nuclear proliferation. "If I had thought there was anything secret in that material, I would have burned it immediately," he said. "I have more respect for those kinds of weapons that the next guy. I don't want to die."

But Hansen says he does believe he has overcome his own irrational fear of nuclear weapons, the hangover from his school days in Seattle. "Because I have spent some time studying them, I know what they are, what they can do," he said. "You have to understand these are merely pieces of hardware. "They are not abstract, unfair threats in the back of your mind. They are very real things, but they are no more real than machine-guns or battleships, just more powerful."

It was that conclusion, Hansen says, that prompted him to delve into the working principles of the hydrogen bomb in his letter to Percy. "I felt that you have to demystify these things a bit before you can begin to discuss the entire subject of nuclear weapons rationally."

The furore over the limited technical segments of his letter is additionally puzzling, Hansen says, because he considers the "political content" to be a great deal more inflammatory. As a matter of fact, Hansen says, his entire interest in what was at first a flap between the Progressive magazine and the Department of Energy is political rather than technical. His explanation of the term political is, however, somewhat involved.

"I am essentially a hobbyist," he says. "I'm interested in writing about military technology, particularly subjects that have never been documented."

In pursuit of that end, Hansen has accumulated a private library of surprising dimensions. His home is lined with shelves of books — pamphlets, historical treatises and technical manuals for everything from sailing ships to Second World War German fighter aircraft.

Hansen said he had first become interested in nuclear arms as objects of research a decade ago and has maintained a passing interest since. Three years ago he wrote an article about the atomic weapons used in World War II for Replica, a model-builders magazine published in San Antonio, Tex. The government never intervened.

The article did, however, figure into the Progressive magazine's research, Hansen says. Howard Morland, who wrote the Progressive article, read Hansen's Replica article and attempted to contact Hansen. Hansen says the two never did meet, although when he learned, early this year, of the Morland article, he was fascinated.

"I was interested in reading the article, although at first that was all," he said. "I probably would have read it and then filed it away for future reference." But he changed his mind when the government tried to suppress the Morland piece.

Hansen says his own politics are quite different from those of the Progressive. "I am kind of conservative," he said. "I'm a registered Republican."

But his politics coincided with the magazine's at least with regard to the government's system of classifying nuclear secrets. "I know that my research contained information from those of the public realm and I believe Morland when he said his did, as well," said Hansen. "And I could see no reason why facts or ideas in the public domain should be classified as secrets by the government."

Hansen admits to a kind of political negativism. "When Big Brother starts telling me that I should leave my decisions to him, I believe it is time to start reaching for my wallet or my gun, whichever is more threatened."

That impulse took over when the government tried to silence the Progressive, Hansen said. "I figured that the only way I could get to see the Morland material was to try and rap the knuckles of the government until they let go of the Progressive."

To that end, Hansen launched a campaign last spring, contacting his own congressman, Democrat Paul N. McCloskey Jr., and other members of Congress, eventually including Percy. (It was the Percy letter, copies of which were sent to several newspapers and reporters as well, that was published in Wisconsin and brought the Progressive case tumbling down.)

Many people got the mistaken impression Hansen was a violence-prone nihilist. "That idea really does bother me now," he said. "I had somebody stop me on the street and say something about a nuclear blueprint, and that is not at all fair."

Hansen added that he does not even "know how to make a blueprint. Early on in this, the government started calling these articles about 'How to build an H-bomb.'

"But neither one of the articles is that. They both should be called 'How an H-bomb Works,' and that is an important distinction."

It is a distinction that may or may not be valid in the public's mind. Reaction to the Progressive controversy has indicated that some believe knowledge of H-bomb working principles is not necessary to informed public discussion.

But Hansen still holds his belief that demystification of nuclear bombs is important. "I suppose someone might call this whole story 'Chuck Hansen, or How I Learned to Stop Worrying and Love the Bomb,'" Hansen said. "That's not entirely true because I don't love those things, but I don't fear them as much any more because I know what they are.

"What I fear now is the people who have authority over them. In the last couple of weeks I have become much more concerned about the irrationality of the Department of Energy."

Thinking lags

I do not live near the proposed McKenzie extension so changes there will not directly affect me, but I agree with Mrs. Preston (Students Affected, Sept. 22) and fellow ratepayers that crying 'foul' is very much to the point.

The Social Credit government came into power in the 1950s and stayed in power because of its road building program. More roads were what the voters wanted, and certainly at the time they were a good idea. The highways department has become very powerful, and for years its decisions went unchallenged. Times, however, have changed. We are faced with dwindling energy resources, traffic congestion and pollution.

Public and political thinking is still lagging when it comes to dealing with the reality of today. A while back Highways Minister Alex Fraser chastised Vancouver area groups for spending money on recreation centres instead of more and wider access routes to Vancouver. Vancouver already suffers traffic congestion, so any move to persuade people to take their recreation in their own community, one would think, would be realistic. At least once a year, too, the cabinet sets up a howl about a mere $15 million lost on public transport (the solution is always to make it more expensive and unattractive.) Then the government boasts of the hundreds of millions used to upgrade highways, and promises of more to come.

At the very least I would like to hear a detailed report on why the McKenzie extension is so important and what the price tag will be. I suspect, and I may be wrong, that the confusion caused by the Blanshard Street extension has made access to the Trans Canada Highway more difficult. Could it be that the plan made by the NDP for a tunnel under the Town and Country made some sense after all?

The fact that groups are getting up and challenging decisions made by various levels of government, shows the people in Victoria are at last taking democracy seriously. We elect "people" to public office, not omniscient angels. Once they are elected we shouldn't just sit back and forget them. We should make them aware of our wishes and controversies. — Monica Oldham, 511 Victoria Street.

Wrong question

I am rather bewildered to find out that Mr. Reilley believes I am running for council because I feel it is influenced by "left-wing interests." Quite to the contrary, had Mr. Reilley gone as far as to read the very paper he is writing to he would have found that I am running because I believe council should have a cross-secton of the community and must not be dominated by the merchant community! Despite my business background I could not be clearer in my intentions.

Mr. Reilley goes on to incorrectly and misleadingly state that, "the private enterprise tourist industry is asking the municipal governments to subsidize its advertising." Nothing could be farther from the truth.

Out of a budget of $173,000 the Victoria Information Center receives total grants of $34,600 from the four core municipalities, or 13 cents per resident. The remaining monies realized come from private enterprise, including $40,000 in membership fees. However, these grants are not given to the tourist industry as such, they are given to the Victoria Information Center, a non-profit association.

Now if the Visitor Information Center was solely for the use of tourists, Mr. Reilley might have a justifiable comment; however, even Victorians utilize their services. Is there anyone in Victoria who has not heard of "Be a Tourist in Your Own Town?"

Mr. Reilley should not ask if I feel the homeowners in Victoria should be forced to subsidize someone else's private business ventures, but rather does he feel that homeowners should be forced to pay increased taxes due to a lack of a non-polluting, renewable industry? Sadly, we cannot have our bread buttered on both sides.— Dermod Travis, Victoria.

Three questions

Funny Coincidence Department:

From The Vancouver Sun, Sept. 18: "Washington (D.C.) — The lowered U.S. speed limit has saved 18,000 lives and billions of gallons of gasoline to date . . . Joan Claybrook, head of the U.S. highway traffic safety administration, said that in 1975 an estimated 3.4 billion gallons were conserved as a result of speed limit enforcement."

From the Victoria Times, Sept. 19: "Highways Minister Alex Fraser said Tuesday it is time to look at highway speed limits with a view to raising them."

Three questions: 1) Has Alex Fraser heard that a fuel shortage is on the way? 2) Is he interested in saving lives, in a province with one of the worst accident records in the country? 3) Has he ever heard of enforcement? — Howard Harris, 403-928 Southgate Street.

When an unexpected accident or illness puts you on your back, your earning power could come to an abrupt end. So might your regular monthly paychecks.

Since get-well cards won't pay the bills, another source of income must be found to ensure your family's financial needs are met while you're unable to work.

A Great-West Life Disability Income Plan will help protect your future. And there's one just right for you and your family. Learn more about our Disability Income insurance plans by calling your Great-West Life agent today.

How best to expunge 500B surplus dollars?

By CLYDE H. FARNSWORTH
New York Times

WASHINGTON — One of the biggest problems central bankers will have to tackle at the International Monetary Fund's (IMF's) annual meeting in Belgrade next week is how to expunge some of the $500 billion worth of surplus dollars in the world.

The fund itself has proposed a plan, but national monetary officials still have large gaps to bridge before they agree upon it. The lending powers have been trying to narrow differences enough for some rough consensus to emerge in Belgrade. The hope is to have a definitive accord on the table by next April's interim fund meeting in Hamburg, West Germany.

The fund's proposal — for a so-called Substitution Account — is one that the United States opposed when it was originally proposed by the former IMF managing director, Johannes Witteveen. The plan, under which governments and official institutions could exchange unwanted dollars for Special Drawing Rights (SDRs), a reserve asset issued by the fund, was then seen by Washington as an effort to diminish the dollar's international role.

But with some congressional prodding, the Treasury now supports the idea as a means of keeping some surplus dollars off the market and thus reducing international pressure on the dollar, such as that which occurred last week when traders sold dollars for West German marks in anticipation of the 2 per cent revaluation that the European Monetary System announced early Monday.

But big questions still remain about who would pay the bills to support the Substitution Account, officials from both the United States and other countries report.

"Quite honestly, it's unknown whether we'll get an agreement or not,'' said Anthony M. Solomon, under secretary of the treasury for monetary affairs. "I would rate the chances 50-50.''

One European monetary official, who requested anonymity, said: "It remains to be seen how much desire there is to bridge the gap. I don't detect much desire as yet.''

Solomon described the Substitution Account as having the potential for a "very significant step in the evolution of the monetary system.'' However, even if the plan is adopted, Congress would have to approve it, which is unlikely in the 1980 election year. Therefore, the earliest it could come into effect would probably be 1981.

Although the basic plan is simple — substituting SDRs for dollars — as another European official said, "The devil is in the details.''

There are some $225 billion of foreign official dollar holdings, but it is an open question how many could be exchanged. Most officials believe the account would have to be able to absorb at least $10 billion for it to have any significant effect. The mountain of dollars abroad in banks and other private hoards would be excluded from the account.

Only $15 billion worth of SDRs, originally created in 1968, now exist. They represent a basket of currencies and pay an interest rate based on the combined average short-term money market rates in the five countries with the largest fund quotas.

New SDRs would have to be created for the Substitution Account, and there are sticky questions about who would accept the financial responsibility to support the account.

Yet to be decided is who will pay the SDR interest. And who will accept the exchange-rate risk if the dollars, while in the Substitution Account, continue to lose value against the SDR. Originally created on par with the dollar, the SDR today is worth about $1.30.

The United States says the costs must be apportioned "jointly,'' but foreign governments resist accepting the burden, arguing that the United States would then be relieved of costs that it now has to bear on dollars outstanding.

One international monetary specialist, Charles Stahl, who publishes Green's Commodity Market Comments, suggests the questions could be resolved by using some of the profits from any new program of IMF gold sales.

The fund's current program of gold sales, to establish a trust fund for poor countries, ends in May. Stahl favors beginning a new selling program both to help the poor countries and to provide financial support for the Substitution Account.

But this could prove to be a difficult issue to negotiate. What worries some experts is that creation of SDRs, unless the dollars they are exchanged for are wiped out of circulation, would represent a new source of world liquidity and generate more inflation.

Exxon's 4th hole is dry

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — Exxon USA's fourth exploratory well in the Baltimore Canyon is a dry hole and the company says future plans for drilling in the area are uncertain.

H. D. Martin, manager of the company's Gulf Atlantic Exploration division, said Thursday there had been no indication of hydrocarbons in the well on block 500, located about 70 miles east of this resort. The well was drilled in 62 metres of water and reached a total depth of 3,735 metres.

Exxon's three previous wells in the Baltimore Canyon area, two in block 684 and one in block 902, also were dry holes and were plugged and abandoned.

Martin said Exxon has spent more than $80 million in drilling operations in the Baltimore Canyon area in addition to about $343 million in lease purchases.

Exxon also announced plans to move the Semi-I drilling vessel from the mid-Atlantic to the south-Atlantic to start operations in the southeast Georgia Embayment Area in an initial program of two wells on federal leases purchased in March 1978.

Exxon started drilling in the Baltimore Canyon area in the spring of 1978. It announced its first dry well in block 684 on Dec. 6, 1978. The company announced the second dry well in block 902 on April 10 and the third dry well on July 6 in block 684.

Inflation costs public faith in money

By LEONARD SILK
Times News Service

NEW YORK — The latest jump in the Consumer Price Index of 1.1 percent in August, or 13.2 percent at an annual rate before compounding, rattled windows around the White House and the Council on Wage and Price Stability. The council promptly raised the wage guideline to 8 percent for those workers who had had only a 7 percent increase in the last year. That includes about 90 percent of all workers.

The Labor Department estimates that the average worker sustained a decline in real wages of more than 4 percent in the last 12 months as living costs climbed faster than pay increases.

Old economics textbooks maintain that most people suffer from what they call "money illusion," the belief that a rise in their money income is the same as a rise in real income. But nowadays most people seem to be suffering from "money disillusion," a loss of faith in paper money and a belief that their money is losing value even faster than it is.

People's reactions to inflation are highly subjective. Raymond F. DeVoe, an analyst at Bruns, Nordeman, Rea & Co., a brokerage firm, has for some time been computing a price index that he calls the Trivia Index. All the updating of his index, he says, has been spurred by some personally startling event.

Thus, watching the nostalgic motion picture Summer of '42, DeVoe was recently thrown for a loop when the young hero asks for an ice cream cone with sprinkles and the druggist behind the soda fountain says, "That'll be 12 cents."

DeVoe reports that his local Baskin-Robbins now charges $1.05 for a double-dip cone without sprinkles. He figures that sprinkles would cost an extra 10 to 15 cents, so the price of the same kind of ice cream cone he once consumed in 1942 has risen by about 900 percent. In the same period, the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index has risen only 348 percent.

— Beefeater martinis have risen from $1.75 to $3.75, a rise of 114 percent.

DeVoe tries to include a number of other items, more or less essential to the life of a stockbroker living on the Upper East Side of New York, that have not increased so much in price. Thus, he includes Beck's beer, up 54 percent; dog license, 33 percent; Cross pen refills, 54 percent, and the cost of getting a suit cleaned and pressed, 37 percent.

But the median gain in his index (the midpoint of all items listed) comes to 76 percent since 1974, and the average increase is 90 percent, compared with a 47.6 percent gain in the Consumer Price Index.

Does the New York stockbroker have anything as valuable to sell as the things he buys?

The Dow Jones average of industrial stocks closed Thursday at 887.46. In 1974, the high for the Dow industrials was 891.66 and the low was 577.60. Even measured from the low, the Dow's gain has been 53 percent, only a little more than the Consumer Price Index. And measured from the peaks — of 1,050.71 in 1973 or 1,036.27 in 1972 or 995.15 back in 1965 — stocks are, as stockbrokers like to say these days, the cheapest things money can buy.

Stocks' value 63.3% higher

TORONTO (CP) — The value of stocks traded on Canadian stock markets rose 63.3 per cent in the third quarter from the same period last year, the Toronto Stock Exchange reported Friday.

Preliminary figures released by the exchange show the value of stocks traded on the Toronto, Montreal, Vancouver, Alberta and Winnipeg markets from July through September was $6.28 billion, compared with $3.85 billion in the third quarter of 1978.

The total value was up 10.8 per cent from the second quarter of this year. Trading value in September was $2.69 billion, up 86.4 per cent from the previous year. Value for the year to date increased 77.4 per cent to $16.54 billion.

The volume of shares traded in the third quarter was 743.9 million shares, up 49 per cent from the third quarter of 1978 and 33.5 per cent from this year's second quarter.

Volume in September was 277.5 million shares, up 62.9 per cent from September, 1978. The year-to-date increase in volume was 39.4 per cent to 1.85 billion shares.

At Toronto, trading value in the third quarter reached a record $3.979 billion, up 56 per cent from the previous year and 6.8 per cent from the previous quarter. September's value rose 76.3 per cent to $2.15 billion, also a record. Value for the year to date was $3.35 billion, up 76.1 per cent.

Third-quarter volume at Toronto was 380.9 million shares, up 29.5 per cent from the same period last year and 22.8 per cent from the second quarter. Volume in September increased 44.2 per cent to 148.2 million shares and for the nine months rose 34.8 per cent to 1.01 billion shares.

Ford cuts car, truck output

DETROIT (UPI) — Ford Motor Co. has announced major cutbacks in car and truck production amid forecasts auto industry output in 1979 will be the lowest in three years.

In a move that will temporarily idle 16,350 workers, Ford said Thursday it will trim production beginning next week at six U.S. assembly plants and one in Canada "to help balance dealer inventories."

In a related development, an authoritative auto industry statistical journal said industry-wide car and truck production this week continued to lag behind last year's pace.

Another trade journal said that 1979 car production will be the lowest since 1976.

Late miscues sting Expos

Times News Services

The days have dwindled to a precious few in Montreal Expos' bid for an East Division title in baseball's National League.

"A tough, tough loss," said manager Dick Williams after Philadelphia Phillies scored a 3-2, 11th-inning victory over the Expos Friday to drop Montreal two games behind the division-leading Pittsburgh Pirates.

The Pirates, with a 6-1 triumph over Chicago Cubs, reduced their magic number to two. Any combination of Pittsburgh victories and Expos defeats totalling two will clinch the pennant for the Pirates.

"All we can do is keep battling them," added Williams. "Now we need help from Chicago Cubs and we're running short of games."

Ironically, the Expos succumbed to Philadelphia mainly because of a costly error by third baseman Larry Parrish, the man destined to become the team's most valuable player this season.

With 40,303 fans — bringing the Expos' attendance mark over 2 million for the first time in the club's 11-year history — settling in for a marathon, Parrish let a grounder by Greg Gross skip through his legs with two out in the 11th.

When left fielder Warren Cromartie fielded the ball, he overthrew second base for another error, allowing Gross to take third and subsequently score when Keith Moreland poked a broken-bat single into centre field against reliever Woodie Fryman, 3-6.

"We didn't play good defence and you can't win games like that," said a dejected Cromartie. "We're just trying too hard to accomodate everybody."

Montreal got single runs in the fourth and fifth innings as John Tamargo stroked a run-scoring single and Parrish produced an RBI double.

But slugger Mike Schmidt jumped on a fastball from starter David Palmer to crash his 45th home run of the season, a two-run shot that tied the score 2-2 in the sixth.

The Expos left baserunners in scoring position with less than two out in both the sixth and 10th innings to support Cromartie's claim that the club may have been pressing.

Regardless of what happens over the next two days — three if Montreal draws to within a game of the Pirates and must play a makeup doubleheader in Atlanta on Monday — the Expos can hold their heads high.

Apart from the crucial loss on the field, the Expos learned after the game that catcher Gary Carter will be out for the remainder of the season because of a thumb injury.

Meanwhile in Cincinnati, there was no champagne in the Reds' locker room, no screaming, no horseplay, none of the usual trappings of a title clinching.

The Reds beat Atlanta Braves 3-0 to assure themselves of at least a tie for the NL's West title. But they were long gone by the time second-place Houston Astros dropped a 6-5 decision to Los Angeles Dodgers on the West Coast, clinching the division for the Reds outright.

The Reds trailed Houston by 10 games on July 4, caught the Astros on Aug. 28 and took the lead to stay on Sept. 11.

The Dodger victory made it a good day for Los Angeles manager Tom Lasorda. He signed a one-year contract to manage the Dodgers.

It's Hunt vs Zaman in world squash final

TORONTO (CP) — Geoff Hunt of Australia and Qumar Zaman of Pakistan advanced to Sunday's final in the world open squash tournament with semi-final victories Friday.

Hunt, the No. 1 seed, easily defeated Mohammed Kahn of Pakistan 9-3, 9-0, 9-2. Zaman had a much more difficult time with Maqsood Ahmed, finally defeating his fellow countryman 9-7, 9-10, 9-4, 6-9, 9-4.

The winner's share of the $50,000 purse is $8,200.

Canada wins amateur title

PERTH, Australia (Reuter) — Canada ended 20 years of British domination by winning the Commonwealth women's amateur golf team championship today for the first time.

In a close battle at the Lake Karrinyup course, the experienced Canadians beat Australia by four matches to two in the competition that decided the championship. Britain defeated New Zealand 3½-2½ for third place.

Australia and Canada were tied 1-1 after morning play, but the Canadians pulled off three victories in the afternoon singles.

Australian captain Lindy Goggin remained unbeaten in singles play by scoring her country's only singles win, 2-up over Stacey West of Thornhill, Ont.

However, Marlene Stewart Streit of Stouffville, Ont., defeated Australia's No. 1, Jane Lock, 2 and 1; Marilyn Palmer O'Connor of Calgary downed Jane Crafter 3 and 1 with some impressive putting, and Michelle Guilbault of Montreal beat Edwina Kennedy 2 and 1.

Kennedy was handicapped in her singles after being hit on the ankle by a ball while watching foursomes play earlier in the day.

Streit described the Canadian victory as the biggest thrill of her golfing career, which has spanned many tournaments and stamped her as one of the world's top amateurs.

In the morning foursomes, Gail Moore of Coquitlam and West beat Sandy MacCaw and Crafter 2 and 1, while Lock and Goggin defeated Streit and Guilbault 3 and 1.

Jets acting tough; turn back Canucks

By Canadian Press

Winnipeg Jets are serving notice they don't intend to be one of the new kids on the block who are content to be kicked around during their initial season in the National Hockey League.

True, the Jets aren't serving notice to any of the powers of the league. But they aren't being embarrassed either.

Far from it.

Winnipeg rallied for a 4-3 verdict over Vancouver Canucks on Friday night to register its second pre-season victory over one of the established NHL teams. The fact that the Canucks are established only in mediocrity is not the point.

The four ex-WHA clubs have played just eight games against their one-time rivals and Winnipeg is the lone club to post a victory. The other three have combined for three ties and three losses.

Tied games are also proving to be reaching epidemic proportions in pre-season play. All of the other exhibition games on Friday ended in 3-3 scores. Boston Bruins tied New York Rangers as did New York Islanders-Atlanta Flames and Philadelphia Flyers and Montreal Canadiens.

Winnipeg blitzed the Canucks with three second period goals to take a 4-2 lead into the last 20 minutes.

* * *

WINNIPEG (4) — Lyle Moffatt, Ron Wilson, Jude Drouin, Morris Lukowich. VANCOUVER (3) — Thomas Gradin, Jere Gillis, Ron Sedlbauer.

Award shared

Mike Duch and Bill Thomas, who shared goaltending duties for Esquimalt Legion of the Western Canada Major Junior Lacrosse League, did their thing again Friday.

Thomas and Duch were named co-winners of the club's most-valuable-player award.

Paul Michael was the only double winner at Legion's annual awards dinner. He was voted the best-conditioned player and the most inspirational.

Tarey Pollock was singled out as the most improved player, Rhys Wickes the top defensive performer, Ed Van Dyk won scoring honors and Dave Angrove was voted the top rookie.

Give Phil credit, says Best

VANCOUVER (CP) — Phil Woosnam, commissioner of the North American Soccer League, should get credit for the English League reversing its blanket ban on NASL-owned players playing on loan in Britain, says John Best, manager of Vancouver Whitecaps.

"This new decision puts us back to where we were, and I think credit must be given to Woosnam, who insisted the agreements must be upheld and hinted at legal action if they weren't," Best said.

The change means players from several NASL clubs are cleared to play in England during the winter season if loan deals had been agreed to before the ban.

Three of the six NASL players involved in the ruling are from the NASL champion Whitecaps: Trevor Whymark (Norwich), Willie Johnston (Birmingham) and Ray Lewington (Wimbledon).

Permission had previously been given to Carl Valentine of the Whitecaps to play for Oldham Athletic, his former English League club. Not included in the list is Roger Kenyon of Vancouver, but the former Everton star may play in Holland.

Meanwhile, the Whitecaps announced it will take a semi-active part in the NASL's indoor league this year. Vancouver will not enter a team but the club has an arrangement that would let some Whitecaps play with Los Angeles Aztecs.

DAN HALLDORSON . . . 36-hole leader

Jimmy the Boomer ready to try tour

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Jimmy Rutledge and Casey Anderson lash at a golf ball with a viscousness that is wonderful to watch and both want to play the United States tournament trail. And that's where immediate similarity ends.

Rutledge, the hometown boy who has been around Victoria golf for so long its hard to believe he still is only 20, is quiet and unassuming. Hates talking. Any sentence longer that "pass the ketchup" is a major speech.

Anderson is 24, a freshman professional in the pro shop at Jackson Park in Seattle. He talks freely, easily and confidently, but with what must be construed as truth.

"Play the PGA tour?" Anderson repeated the question put to him at the British Columbia Open tournament Friday. "I'd love nothing better. But I don't think I'm ready. Too many guys can beat me. There are parts of my game that need work, and you don't get as much time for practicing as you would like when you're working."

The long-drive champion of the Pacific Northwest states, Anderson will bide his time before he makes any move towards tour golf.

Rutledge, who beat out Anderson Friday and became the long-drive champion of B.C., lets his golf game do his talking. He has quiet confidence, and, quite suddenly it may be that the Oak Bay High grad is ready for golf's big gamble.

He'll leave next week for San Diego and his first bid to qualify for a PGA Approved Players Card.

The long-drive competition is nice. Rutledge, five-11 and only 175 pounds, drove a ball 295 yards, most of it uphill on the first hole at Glen Meadows Golf and Country Club. Anderson finished second, at 292, and Vancouver's Ray Stewart placed third with a 279-yard poke.

The thing about the driving competition is that it wasn't just a one-time effort for Rutledge. For some time now, the slender Rutledge has been impressing all with his drives. He's been doing it again this week at the $20,000 event sponsored by Chateau Victoria and Harbour Towers, and when he consistently outdistances some of the country's leading long knockers, then you have to suspect that Rutledge is not stepping out of his class.

Nor is Rutledge ready to concede anything to Dan Halldorson. A PGA tour regular from Shilo, Man., Halldorson scored his second straight 69 Friday to take the driver's seat moving into today's final round.

At 138 after two rounds, Halldorson was one pop in front of Rutledge, two ahead of talented Rick Acton of Kirkland, Wash., and three ahead Cec Ferguson of Regina, John Morgan of Victoria and the Casey Anderson. Stocky Jerry Anderson of Toronto, winner of three provincial opens earlier this year, and defending champion Dave Barr of Kelowna were next in line at 142.

Ferguson, the first-round leader with a 67, suffered some putting woes and came up with a 74 Friday to allow Halldorson, Rutledge and Acton to slip ahead of him.

It still was anyone's tournament.

Including Casey's. In three rounds at Glen Meadows, the Seattle pro has yet to go over par. He was 70 in Wednesday's pro-am, had a 71 Thursday and a 70 Friday.

And he loves the Meadows' putting surfaces. He took only 29 putts Thursday and 28 Friday.

Anderson's problem has been hitting the green in regulation.

"I hit 16 greens in the pro-am. Thursday I hit 10 greens and today (Friday) I hit 11. If I can hit 16 greens again and get another 29 putts, then I may do something on the final day," he said.

According to Halldorson, approaching the greens properly is the answer at Glen Meadows.

"There is a fair amount of grain to the greens," said Dan, "and you have to hit your iron shots to within 20 feet of the hole if you want to score well.

"I haven't been hitting my irons as well as I can," added the 36-hole leader.

But their problems, as well as their hopes and intentions, were to be settled today.

Shavers wouldn't quit until ref stopped bout

By WILL GRIMSLEY

LAS VEGAS (AP) — "Man, stop the fight," heavyweight champion Larry Holmes begged the referee. "Look at him — all banged up, cut around both eyes. He's hurt. What do you want me to do — kill him?"

Challenger Earnie Shavers, a battered 35-year-old, hung limply on the ropes. His legs were rubbery, his eyes glazed. He couldn't raise his arms for defence.

"I begged Earnie to quit, too," Holmes said. "I said, 'Man, why you hanging on? Why don't you quit?' He said, 'I ain't quitting. I'm trying to take your title away.' "

At two minutes of the 11th round, referee Davey Pearl stepped between Holmes and a bleeding Shavers, and raised Holmes' hand as successful defender of the World Boxing Council heavyweight crown.

Twice the 29-year-old champion pulled himself off the floor — once in the seventh from a right to the head, again in the ninth after a half-slip — for his 32nd victory and 23rd knockout without a defeat as a pro.

Shavers went to hospital to have doctors sew up ugly gashes around both eyes.

It was a knockdown, dragout brawl reminiscent of the now-legendary third Muhammad Ali-Joe Frazier "Thrilla of Manila" in October, 1975, and it turned an affluent crowd of 4,500, who paid up to $250 a seat, into a wild frenzy at the Caesars Palace pavilion.

The television audience was estimated by ABC at 50 million.

Holmes, a standup boxer with speed and skill who never has gained the recognition he deserved, proved himself a true champion. He appeared on the verge of being knocked out in the seventh, when he was send thudding on his back by a thunderous Shavers right, but he steadied and was in full charge at the finish.

Holmes now virtually has run out of suitable opponents until the WBC and the rival World Boxing Association can reach some sort of accomodation to end the split in the division. Olympic silver medalist John Tate and South Africa's Gerry Coetzee meet in Pretoria, South Africa, Oct. 20 for the WBA version of the title.

In other fights on the star-spangled show, Sugar Ray Leonard retained his North American welterweight crown by stopping Andy Price in 2:52 of the first round; Wilfredo Gomez of Puerto Rico stopped Carlos Mendoza of Mexico in 2:29 of the 10th to retain his WBC super bantamweght title, and the tough Roberto Duran of Panama, the former lightweight champion, scored a 10-round decision over Zeferino Gonzalez of Los Angeles in a welterweight bout.

But it remained for Holmes and Shavers to lift the crowd into a crescendo of excitement. The fight lacked the finer points of the Ali-Frazier duels, but for raw drama it was memorable.

The earlier rounds were relatively uneventful but not lacking in tension as Holmes used his dancing feet and quick hands to keep at bay the aggressive, ever-pressing Shavers.

As Shavers swung wildly, there always was the sense that any minute he might land one of his roundhouse blows and enhance his record as the greatest knockout puncher in heavyweight history. In his 58 victories, he had scored 56 KOs.

While his corner yelled, "Stick him, stick him, stick him," Holmes fought a masterful — if seemingly tentative and furtive — fight. He beat a tattoo on Shavers' head and gloves with his flicking left as the bald-headed, mustachioed "Mongolian Warrior," as Shavers calls himself, chased his prey and swung from the floor. Most of the vicious blows fell on Holmes's arms or empty air.

Then came the climactic seventh. Almost too quickly to see, the powerfully-built Shavers unloaded a smashing right that caught the champion on the jaw.

Holmes fell flat. The crowd gasped in anticipation of a upset.

Holmes rose to his feet unsurely and was weaving and swaying as Shavers intensified the attack. But Shavers never was able to put over the crusher. Holmes's handlers worked over him busily between rounds.

The graceful, 6-foot-3 champion came out for the eighth more refreshed but doubly cautious.

Shavers, on the other hand, seemed to go into an immediate eclipse. He was breathing heavily and bleeding from gashes around both eyes and on his right cheek. His legs wobbled. He couldn't hold up his hands to protect himself from Holmes's relentless jabs.

It was obvious that the aging son of a one-time Alabama cotton picker had spent himself.

"He took a lot of punches," he said. "He surprised me. I didn't think he could hit that hard. He never gave up. I went to him afterward and I said, 'Earnie, I love you. You're a great fighter. You'll be around as long as you want.' "

Shavers, who has been fighting 11 years against all comers, said he planned to continue fighting.

COUGARS OPEN CAMPAIGN AGAINST BRUINS TONIGHT

Pounds and inches 'buy' Lupul a ticket to Dallas

GARY LUPUL
. . . prepared to work

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

A good big man may not always beat a good little man, but he usually does in the National Hockey League draft.

Otherwise, centre Gary Lupul might be looking forward to a season with the Vancouver Canucks instead of their Central League farmhands, Dallas Black Hawks.

The 20-year-old Victoria Cougar graduate was in the Dallas lineup Thursday night at Memorial Arena and helped set up the first goal in an 8-6 exhibition victory over the Cats.

Lupul came out of Powell River four years ago, played a season with Nanaimo Clippers in the B.C. Junior League and moved up to Victoria under coach Pat Ginnell. His last two years here, under Jack Shupe, were capped by a 53-goal, 54-assist output in the Western League last season.

A fast-skating junior coming off a 107-point year figures to go somewhere in the draft. Lupul was bypassed, though, possibly because his height and weight — 5'9" and 175 pounds — don't look terribly impressive on the statistics sheet.

Shupe thinks Lupul would have been drafted if he were bigger but points out he's not the kind of player who gets bounced around.

"He's a tough kid, he's strong and he'll hit," said Shupe, whose Cougars open the 1979-80 season against New Westminster Bruins in Memorial Arena tonight.

"A big guy with a lot less ability has a lot easier time making it in the NHL. In Lupul's case, because of his size he needs a year or two before he can make it. If he were a little bigger, he'd be up a lot sooner."

"I figured I had a good chance to be drafted," Lupul said after Thursday's appearance here.

Does he agree his size was a factor in missing out.

"It had to be," he replied.

The NHL junior draft last June went only six rounds and 59 of the choices were under-age players who, unlike Lupul, haven't reached their 20th birthday and thus have junior eligibility remaining.

As a result, Anderson estimates an over-age junior had the equivalent of only about 1½ rounds — probably fewer than 40 chances — to be selected.

Even so, Lupul's skating and quickness did not go unnoticed.

After the draft, he got 11 phone calls inviting him to tryouts. Vancouver and Minnesota North Stars offered contracts.

"I picked Vancouver," he explained "because I figured I had a better shot at making it."

Although he's ticketed for Dallas, if he plays there as well as Shupe believes he can, it's just a matter of time.

"He's the kind of kid who comes out day after day and gives you 110 per cent, even in practice," Shupe said.

"I'll work as hard as I can," Lupul echoed.

Broncos belt Tigers

By The Canadian Press

Gord Williams had an eight-point night as he led Lethbridge Broncos to a lopsided 14-0 victory over Medicine Hat Tigers in Lethbridge in one of three Western Hockey League games Friday.

Williams, back from a trial with Philadelphia Flyers of the National League, scored six goals and added two assists.

The scores were one-sided in the other two games as Saskatoon Blades belted Great Falls Americans 9-2 in Saskatoon and Portland Winter Hawks defeated Seattle Breakers 6-1 in Seattle.

A bench-clearing brawl at the end of the second period marred the game. Referee Joe Wensink issued 28 major penalties and six game misconducts. The Pat Ginnell-coached Tigers took 16 of 23 minor penalties.

It was not as rough in Saskatoon but referee Bruce Rogers of Regina assessed the Americans 10 of 18 minor penalties, four of seven majors, a misconduct and a game misconduct.

Cowichan promises new look

Lake Cowichan's Bairds Trucking finished fifth and Esquimalt Legion second, but the Truckers indicated Friday that things are going to be different in the 1979-80 South Island Junior "B" Hockey League campaign.

Sparked by netminder Mike Bell's 39-stop performance and the two-goal efforts of Rob Frost and Mark Johnson, the Truckers cruised to a 6-2 victory over Esquimalt in the league opener at the Sports Centre.

Thistles, Bays erupt

Mt. Douglas Thistles and Victoria High's Tyees are rolling along merrily but an impressive Friday performance by Oak Bay suggest that the run for first place in the Greater Victoria High School Soccer League is going to be a three-cornered arugment.

The unbeaten Thistles trounced Stelly's 9-0 to rejoin Tyees in a tie for first place. Both sport 4-0, won-lost records but the Bays are right behind (3-1) after crushing Reynolds Roadrunners 7-2.

In other games Friday, Spectrum came through with its initial victory by tripping Parkland 4-2 and winless Esquimalt held Claremont to a 3-3 draw.

Peter Skillings led Oak Bay's assault with three goals, boosting his total to seven in four games. Dave Studders, Mark Wyatt, Neil Antolin and Jeff Arnot added the others while Russ Gurney and Charlie Burnham scored for Reynolds.

Denis Mamic (3), Rob Wallace (2), Keith Smith (2), Mark Crisp and Colin Ayers scored in Mt. Doug's romp.

Mark Jackson and Derek Gelaude each rammed in to goals to fashion Spectrum's victory. Dexter Williams and Ron Sewell scored for Parkland.

Mazurak out

REGINA (CP) — Veteran wide receiver Steve Mazurak will miss the rest of the Canadian Football League season with torn knee ligaments, Saskatchewan Roughriders have reported.

Tour mark falls

DALLAS (AP) — Nancy Lopez Melton, the dominant force on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour the past two years, sounded a warning Friday to the rest of the field in the $150,000 Dallas Open.

"I've gotten my confidence back," said the tour's leading money-winner, who fashioned a six-under-par 66 Friday to tie first-round leader Jan Stephenson at the halfway point.

Melton's round included a 30 on the front nine, with an incredible seven birdies on the first eight holes.

Her 10 birdies set an LPGA single-round record. Her four birds in a row on the front nine was one short of the LPGA record and she missed the LPGA record for a nine-hole score by one shot.

Lopez faltered briefly on the back nine with a bogey and a double-bogey, but rallied for birdies on 17 and 18 to tie Stephenson at the head of the pack.

"I was starting to lose my confidence and it was bothering me mentally," Lopez said after Friday's round. "It had gotten to the point where it was putting me on my backside and the game was no fun."

Stephenson shot a 71 Friday, finishing with bogeys on each of the last two holes to drop her into the tie.

Three shots off the pace at the halfway mark is Sandra Post.

Golf series halted

AKRON, Ohio (AP) — Officials were trying again this morning to get in the rain-delayed second round of the $400,000 World Series of Golf.

"Our forecast is rather questionable," said Clyde Mangum, deputy commissioner for the Professional Golfers' Association tour. "That front is still hanging around."

It was for that reason that Mangum decided to schedule a single round today and a double round of 36 holes for Sunday after Friday's play was rained out.

Steady rain flooded parts of the Firestone Country Club course Friday. Tees, greens and some fairways were under water.

None of the 38 players in the elite, international field had teed off when play was called off for the day.

Andy Bean, who came within a single shot of the course record, was the first-round leader of the with a no-bogey, six-under-par 64. J.C. Snead and Australian veteran Graham Marsh were next at 66.

Lee Trevino, Tom Kite and Lon Hinkle were another stroke back at 67. Tom Watson, already the winner of a record $447,000 and five titles this season, had an opening 68 that left him four strokes back.

Watson, virtually assured of a third consecutive sweep of the Vardon Trophy, Player-of-the-Year honors and the leading money-winner spot, said he does not expect to play in this country again this season.

Fishermen on the southern end of Vancouver Island took a fair share of the hidden weight prizes during the recent B.C. Salmon Derby, which ran from July 1 to Sept. 3.

Bill McFarlane, Brian Cooper and Bess Day of Victoria joined Neil Caddell of Cobble Hill in the prize list.

Chuck DeKay of Lafayette, Calif., earned the top fishing prize of $10,000 in gold for his 63-pound, eight-ounce tyee from Campbell River waters and William Oglivie of Campbell River won the top hidden-weight prize of $25,000 in gold.

Colwood pairing tops

The Royal Colwood partnership of Evelyn Currie and Ann Belither combined for a net 72½ Friday at Uplands Golf Club to capture medal honors in the annual Victoria and district women's foursomes tournament.

Despite home course advantage, only two pairings from Uplands qualified for the championship flight. They were Kay Tribe and Phyllis Coxworth and Lorna Rooper and Diane Phillips. Colwood led the way with six qualifying teams.

Trudy Young and Irene Nyberg of Sooke's Broome Hill Club and Gorge Vale's Sylvia Burnip and Laura Innes tied for the last qualifying spot with net 77s. The Young-Nyberg team won on retrogression.

12-inch size limit stays on chinook

Ottawa has decided not to make fishermen throw back all chinook salmon under 20 inches, Defence Minister Allan McKinnon said Friday.

The problem, McKinnon said, is the minimum size for cohos and pinks remained at 12 inches and some anglers can't tell the species apart.

Federal fisheries officials had been concerned about the supply of chinooks.

1.2 million people - one-third of population - strive for glimpse of pope in Dublin

Greetings from on high

DUBLIN (AP) — Pope John Paul sent messages today to the heads of Switzerland, France, England and Ireland as his papal plane winged over Europe at the start of an historic pilgrimage to Ireland.

In separate telegrams to Presidents Hans Hurlimann of Switzerland and Valery Giscard D'Estaing of France, the pontiff conveyed his greetings and wishes for "happiness and spiritual progress" for the peoples of their countries.

In both messages, John Paul mentioned his "preoccupation for peace."

As the Aer Lingus jumbo jet, dubbed St. Patrick, entered British airspace, the pontiff sent a message to Queen Elizabeth.

"I gladly take the opportunity of extending cordial greetings to your majesty and I invoke from almighty God upon you, the royal family, the government and all your people abundant blessings of prosperity and peaceful progress."

To Irish President Patrick Hillary, the pontiff said: "As the moment of my arrival in Ireland approaches, I send your excellency my warm greetings and assure you of my prayers for your country and its beloved people."

No sign of lost woman

Searchers plying Pacific waters have found no sign of a 22-year-old Iowa woman who disappeared from the USS Norton Sound, the first woman sailor reported lost at sea by the U.S. Navy.

The oiler USS Ashtabula continued the search today off the coast of Washington state for fireman Muriel M. MacBride of Ames, Iowa, who disappeared around dawn Thursday.

Aircraft rejoined the search after sunrise today, in an area about 230 miles southwest of Vancouver, where the Norton Sound was sailing at the time.

The sea and weather were described as calm at the time of her disappearance from the USS Norton Sound, which has more women crew members — 68 out of a total 397 — than all but one other ship in the U.S. Pacific fleet.

The Norton Sound continued on to keep a rendezvous with 45 U.S. and Canadian warships carrying 40,000 sailors in a large training exercise off the West Coast.

The missing woman was last seen at 3 a.m. Thursday and did not appear for the roll call four hours later.

"We don't know where she was or what she was doing aboard the ship when she disappeared," said Mark Baker, public affairs officer for the Naval Surface Force Pacific. "She is officially lost at sea."

Boycott stepped up

SURREY (CP) — The British Columbia Federation of Labor urged its 260,000 members of affiliated unions Friday to intensify a boycott against Adams Laboratories where a bitter strike has been dragging on since Feb. 21.

Date fouls up his dream-job

Make their day at NFB office: borrow a movie

By

LORRAINE LOCHERTY

Director Wally Lea, watching pedestrians go by outside the Wharf Street entrance, sometimes wishes he could use stronger measures to attract their attention.

But blatant publicity tactics would never win the approval of his landlord, the federal customs department.

The Victoria NFB office is a free spirit trapped in the bowels of a government building and sometimes mistaken for part of the bureaucracy.

"I didn't realize this place was here," people who wander in off the street comment.

Lea has spent the past three years making the NFB office a place people like to visit.

"I want it to be as easily accessible as possible," he says and then leans forward eagerly to ask for an appraisal of the operation.

The NFB office is a quiet friendly place. The atmosphere is relaxed and Lea, who rarely wears a tie, prefers the soft glow of the reading lamp on his desk to the harsh regulation lighting.

Like books in a public library, tins of film are stacked in self-serve racks, ready to be borrowed.

It doesn't cost any money and the borrower doesn't even need a special card.

Just walk in off the street, select up to six films and sign them out. The films are on loan for a maximum three days.

In addition to the 700 films in permanent stock, NFB and CBC productions not in the office can be ordered by catalogue.

Lea and his staff show customers how to read the catalogues and make suggestions to people looking for films on a particular theme.

The NFB produces 100 new documentaries a year on subjects ranging from wilderness survival to juvenile delinquency.

Users include school kids researching term papers and the human resources ministry.

Lea, who spends a lot of time promoting new films, recently screened Hot Wheels, a new release about teenagers, for the Victoria police department.

Screenings are held in a small private theatre on the premises. Lea will personally run the projector for community organizations and other groups, provided they ask in advance and have a worthwhile cause.

About 20,000 film bookings are made through the Victoria branch yearly, Lea estimates.

Casual film users walk in off the street anytime, but the branch has about 1,000 regular borrowers, including institutions like the University of Victoria.

Orders come in from all over Vancouver Island and are shipped prepaid. The user only pays the return postage.

The NFB celebrates it's 40th anniversary this year. During its life it has received international recognition as one of the finest film-production units in the world, with a total 1,600 top international film awards including five Oscars and three Cannes film festival prizes.

For Lea, who has spent most of his career as a NFB film distributor abroad, the job is a never-ending promotion of all the good things the NFB offers.

"I love the product and the organization, so I'm going to promote it."

Max Low

Our first venture into the wacky world of vanity licence plates is turning out to be a whole lot crazier than we anticipated.

Though many British Columbians applied for their Personalized Number-Plates (as they're called even though they could be made up entirely of letters) nearly three months ago, at this point no one seems to know where they are or even what they'll look like!

Now, I didn't apply for personalized plates for my car. I was mildly tempted, though, and thought I could have MAX or TIMES or PRESS on them, but clung to the belief that anonymity was better. Anyway, I rather like the ones I got with the luck of the draw as they have the number 007. "Just you and James Bond," the woman in the office where I picked them up told me with a grin.

New Zealand-born Neville Morrison was one of those Victoria people who did get their names in, though, when applications opened on July 3.

Like the others, he was told to "please allow approximately 60 days for processing and for manufacture of your personalized number-plates." Now, approximately 90 days later, Neville wants to know where they are.

You see, Neville had been in a big hurry to make sure he got the letters he wanted: KIWI.

Though he has lived in Canada about 13 years, Neville is very proud of his Down Under heritage. He is Island representative of the Australia and New Zealand Association which he says has 250 members in Victoria and around 10,000 in B.C. His dream is to open here one day his own New Zealand restaurant serving such delicacies as lamb and pavlova (a kind of meringue cake, for you uninitiated) though, of course, not on the same plate.

"I got down there when they opened and was second in line," Neville explains.

He has since learned he will get plates with KIWI on but, if someone had beaten him to that, his next choices in order of preference were AUCK NZ, ANZA and NEVI.

The plates, which cost $75 for five years on top of your regular licence fee, may contain any combination of six letters and/or numbers with or without a space in between. Providing, that is, whatever you choose doesn't clash with any existing licence plates or (in the words of the Motor Vehicle Branch) may be considered offensive, suggestive or not in good taste."

"That means," in the words of Neville, "you can't have anything about sex or booze. All the words that are no-nos were worked out by computers."

But Neville isn't too bothered about what you can't have. He'd just like to have what you can have and he'd like to have it pretty soon. However, he has done a fair bit of inquiring and his advice to all the rest of you who are waiting for your own special plates is: Don't hold your breath!

"When I phoned the Motor Vehicle Branch, they put me through to a man named Clark in an office on Douglas Street but he could only tell me there had been problems with the manufacture and that we should get the plates by the end of October," Morrison says.

I had even less success. When I phoned and asked for Mr. Clark, I was told he wasn't there at the moment and anyway they'd been asked not to put any more calls through.

While confessing that no one there really knew exactly when the vanity plates will arrive, an MVB clerk insisted that I should be hearing some news of them in about two weeks.

"They're having problems with the kind of metal they're using," she explained vaguely.

Ah, so if they're using new metal, the plates might look quite different to the present ones?

"Oh yes," the woman agreed.

Then what will they look like?

"We're not quite sure," she said hesitantly and you could feel the blushes over the phone. "At the moment we don't know exactly what they're going to look like. They'll probably still have British Columbia on them to show what province they come from but I don't know if they'll have the 'Beautiful.' We're told they're going to be different colors and be scenic with mountains and water and stuff . . ."

How lovely. Stuff has long been one of my favorite pictorial ingredients. And Neville really appreciates all that work going into his very own licence plates. But he'd still like to know when the hell they'll be here.

"I've paid my $75 for five years," he said, "but the way it's going the five years will be up before we get the bloody things!"

Storefront smash

A 21-year-old man has been charged with impaired driving after a car slammed into the side of a store in Victoria Friday night.

The man has also been charged with driving without a driver's licence and driving while his licence is under suspension.

The driver, whose name has not been released pending his court appearance, was only slightly injured in the mishap which occurred at about 9 p.m. at the United Engineering shop, 575 Pembroke.

Three try for mayoralty

By NORMAN GIDNEY

Ald. Bill Tindall resigned as manager of the Better Business Bureau Friday to run for mayor.

He'll joust for the job with fellow aldermen Murray Glazier and John Hayes.

Tindall's decision to run — widely predicted — means the Victoria mayoralty race is now a three-man contest.

At 58 with eight years on council, Tindall is the city's elder statesman, and he has a quiet and mild-mannered approach to politics.

"I'm not going to get up on a pedestal and tell all and sundry I'm going to set the world on fire," he told a press conference.

"The city needs to have a person to make decisions based on facts and logic rather than emotion."

Tindall promised to devote at least one day every two weeks to an open house in the mayor's office when ordinary people can come to city hall and talk to the chief magistrate or his designated representative about their personal problems.

As a director of the new Urban Transit Authority set up by the province to control all B.C. transit systems, Tindall made special mention of Victoria's need to get more commuters to use the bus.

The Free Wheeler bus scheme, which goes into effect Wednesday morning — free rides on all city buses within the central Victoria area — is a first step and Tindall said a monthly bus pass at $18 or $20 is also in the works.

On policing, the alderman acknowledged the controversial debate that has raged for several months but thought Victoria reasonably well-served in terms of manpower, although the new chief may convince him that more police are needed.

"I expect he will be a man familiar with communities of this size and with some innovative ideas — although this is no criticism of Chief Jack Gregory."

If it's proved the city needs another six or eight police, city council will try to finance the added cost by diverting dollars from other areas of the budget, or as a last resort, increasing the mill rate.

The closest he came to direct criticism of his fellow candidates was to say that the person Victorians elect mayor on Nov. 17 should have a plan for the 1980s and not start working on a platform after the election is over.

Ald. Glazier's main campaign plank is Cityplan, a huge citizen task force to draft goals and objectives for Victoria in the coming decade.

Tindall's replacement as head of the BBB is Denny Ryan, whose appointment takes effect Monday.

Ryan was a public relations officer with the Canadian Forces, serving in Calgary, Victoria and Edmonton and overseas in the Gaza Strip, Cyprus and Cairo.

Born in Calgary, Ryan, 51, enlisted in the army in 1962. Previously he was a radio news broadcaster on the prairies and in Vernon.

He said Friday he will maintain an interest in Island Professional Displays Ltd., a company he formed 18 months with Doug Lewis of Victoria Photo Supply Ltd. and their two wives, but will work fulltime at the BBB job.

His company provides the hardware and other paraphernalia for conventions, trade shows and the like.

He belongs to the Victoria Rotary Club, the Royal United Services Institute of Vancouver Island and Oak Bay United church. He also is public relations director for the Boy Scouts Victoria region.

Police arrest burglars

City police have recovered $1,200 worth of stolen property and arrested two persons, one of them a juvenile, in connection with three house break-ins over the past two days.

The suspects, aged 16 and 17, were picked up just a few hours after the occupant of a house at 3119 Glasgow reported his residence had been broken into and several items stolen earlier in the day.

The two have also been charged with a break-in at a house at 3151 Glasgow Friday morning, and another at a house at 518 Joffre in Esquimalt Thursday.

Collector's coins, cash, diamond rings and liquor were among the goods taken.

McKinnon 'open' on unification

By AL FORREST

Defence Minister Allan McKinnon is doing his best to retain an open mind about unification of the armed forces.

He says unification has both its good and bad points.

For example, he said in an interview Friday, the service seems to be top heavy with senior staff.

"That's one thing we're going to take a close look at."

On the other hand, there have been some improvements in efficiency as a result of unification.

The number of supply depots has been reduced by 75 per cent.

"That's a remarkable saving. And the supply system works very well, at least in peacetime. What we must consider is how well it would work in the event of war."

Transportation services have also improved in some areas.

"If a group in the navy wanted to go up-Island it would often take a month to get trucks because the army had them all. Now there is no delay."

McKinnon said there was a long debate before deciding to go ahead with the study.

Unification, brought in by the Liberal government, had created such emotional turmoil that he had been reluctant to re-open the question.

"The hearings could be a traumatic experience. Still, we have to know the answers."

McKinnon said the study group may well conclude unification should be retained but that improvements must be made in some areas.

The study group will hold public hearings in seven cities, including Victoria. The work will begin Nov. 26, probably in Halifax, and end on the west coast in December.

Preliminary work is already under way. Senior officers at defence headquarters in Ottawa are being interviewed and a number of bases will be visited by the study group starting Oct. 8.

McKINNON

. . . it's good and bad.

"We're starting by talking to the people most concerned about unification," McKinnon said.

McKinnon was in the city to address a student meeting at University of Victoria.

He gave an inside look into the bureaucratic workings of a federal department, jesting that the students should know about the pitfalls in advance "because most of you will probably be working for the government."

McKinnon said he was amazed and disappointed to learn it takes a full month to respond to a letter.

Any letter on defence questions is referred to military officials who indicate where the necessary background information can be found and decide who should write the letter.

Then there is the process of checking the letter and possibly having it re-written.

As a result, the letter is up and down like a yo-yo before it is finally approved by staff and placed on McKinnon's desk for his approval and signature.

After a delay like that, he said, he is reluctant to order any re-writes himself but found he had to, at least in the early going, so staff would understand the tone he wanted in replies.

Military letters tend to be brief and a bit curt, he said.

He has stressed the need to be courteous in all replies.

The minister said he is still trying to find a way to speed up the process of responding to letters.

"It can take five hours a day signing letters especially since I always read them before I sign. Because I'm not in Ottawa today (Friday) there will be ten hours worth waiting for me on Monday."

McKinnon told the students patronage is common in some departments in Ottawa. Some boards and commissions are made up mainly of defeated Liberal MPs, he said.

Ask the Times

Q. Can you tell me how the practice of wearing school ties started? M.P.

A. It originated in Oxford University where boater bands were converted into use as "ribbon ties." The earliest definitive evidence stems from an order from Exeter College for college ties, dated June 25, 1880.

Q. Was the Six Day War the shortest ever? — N.H.

A. No. The shortest recorded war lasted 38 minutes in 1896 and was between the United Kingdom and Zanzibar. The self-appointed Sultan Sa'id Khalid was bombarded for from 9:02 a.m. until 9:40 a.m. when he surrendered.

Q. Could you tell me where the largest bonspiel in the world is played? Is it Scotland? C.B.

A. No. It is the Alcan Employees' Bonspiel which is held in Arvida, Que. It lasts 22 days, 396 games and involves 200 teams of four players.

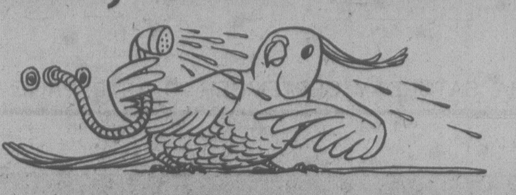
He's fowl, but won't wash

By DR. FRANK MILLER



Wonderful World of Animals

DEAR DR. MILLER: Numerous attempts to induce Gregory Pecker, my cockatiel, to a bath have met with raucous protest. He preens and seems to take generally good care of himself. Are baths a necessity? M. H.

DEAR M. H.: As long as G.P.'s plumage appears to be in good condition, you needn't worry. You might find he'd prefer a fine mist shower to a tub bath. Many birds do. A cockatiel can get by without either one, though, without serious consequences.

DEAR DR. MILLER: My manx cat, who lived to be 29, had a special secret to a long life. He stretched every few steps he took. He always did it, from the first time I saw him until the last. D. S.

DEAR D. S.: Manx cats may have problems with their hindquarters because the base of the spine may, as the result of heredity, be somewhat compressed. This breed peculiarity may have been the primary reason your cat was a super stretcher though, of course, cats generally do stretch a lot, and it can, indeed, have a bearing on longevity. A homo sapien who developed a "step-or-two-then-stretch" life style might have trouble keeping up with the mainstream, and maybe that's not all bad. He (or she) might live longer, too.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Why can't a rhesus monkey who has tuberculosis be treated for it? The monkey doesn't look or act sick, but the doctor is planning on putting it to sleep. V. T.

DEAR V. T.: While successful treatment of TB may be possible in primates, treating the rhesus would be risky. During this prolonged period, the infected animal could spread the disease to other susceptible species, including homo sapiens. Tuberculosis monkeys are seldom treated, then, because of this high risk factor.

DEAR DR. MILLER: What's the usual load limit on fleas? Archie usually carries a whole herd and pays no attention to them. Pruny, who's almost as big, usually carries a dozen or so, but scratches a lot more than he does. Why? R. P.

DEAR R. P.: "Load limits" for fleas vary considerably. Ideally the count should be zero. There are many dogs so susceptible to flea bites, or even contact with a flea that doesn't bite, that one or two can cause severe skin inflammation and itching. Conversely, a canine like Archie may apparently be able to tolerate legions of fleas with no ill effects. That's not true, though. Fleas are bloodsuckers and a heavy load can cause anemia. They also can carry and transmit many diseases, from simple tapeworms to several more serious. Consider, too, that the fleas won't stay on Archie forever. They'd spread to Pruny, other pets, and possibly people. Finally, Archie could become allergic, seemingly overnight and formerly high tolerances for fleas could be reduced to none.

From then on, he could be acutely uncomfortable with just one. There is really no allowable limit on fleas. They are, remember, the most common cause of skin disease in dogs and cats.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Jed, our horse, was rubbing the hair off his tail, and nothing we put on it helped. We were astounded when the vet found that Jed had pinworms. Jed was treated and no longer has an itchy rear. The hair is growing back. Since then, though, we've been watching Primrose, our dog, closely to see if she could have gotten them. She and Jed were good friends. So far she's fine, but I'm just wondering, could these pinworms do something to a dog besides make her itch — something we don't kow about? W. A.

DEAR W. A.: Jed's pal won't be affected by his previous parasitic problem. Dogs don't develop pinworm infestations from horses. They don't even have a pinworm species of their own. While it's perfectly possible for Primrose sooner or later to have an itch, you can bet pinworms wouldn't be at the bottom of it.

Dear Readers:

I have had so many requests to repeat my column on fire prevention that it has become a tradition. So here it is, with updated figures:

Last year, 10,500 Americans perished and nearly 34,000 civilians, plus 100,000 firemen, were seriously injured in more than 3.5 million fires. In Canada, 811 deaths were caused by 74,043 fires.

The chief causes of fires, in order of the toll taken, were:

1. Smoking
2. Electrical wiring
3. Heating and cooking equipment
4. Children playing with matches
5. Open flames and sparks
6. Flammable liquids
7. Suspected arson
8. Chimneys and flues
9. Lightning
10. Spontaneous ignition

The total fire loss last year was in excess of $6 billion in the United States and better than $570 million in Canada.

Now for some tips that could save your life:

Be sure your cigarette is out. Matches, too. Never leave matches and lighters within reach of children.

Don't run cords under rugs or over radiators where they may get damaged. Replace a cord if it is frayed.

Never leave small children or invalids alone in the house. Not even for a few minutes.

Have your wiring and electrical installations done by a professional.

Never use flammable liquids for dry-cleaning indoors.

Have a fire drill in your home to be sure everyone knows what to do in case of fire. Designate a specific meeting place outside so you will all know who's outside of the house.

Remember: Fire extinguishers put out 97 percent of all fires on which they were used, and most large fires start as small fires.

Some excellent smoke and fire-detection systems are available to homeowners. Shop around; buy the one that suits your needs.

Now, in case of fire:

If you suspect fire, alert the rest of the household. But first feel the top of the door. If it's hot, don't open it. Escape through the window.

If you can't open the window, break it with a chair. Cover the rough edges with a blanket, sit on the window ledge with one leg hanging outside and one inside, and wait for help.

If you live in an apartment building, use the stairway. don't take a chance on the elevator. If it fails, you're trapped.

Once out, stay out. No treasure is worth risking your life.

It took less than three minutes to read this column. Was it worth it? I hope so.

Before you toss out a pair of scuffed, summer leather shoes, consider how they would look dyed brown or black. It's easy to remove all the old polish with a household drycleaning fluid and brush on a couple of dye coats. The cost to winterize the summery shoes: About $2. You can give the same treatment to a pair of sale-priced new summer shoes, too.

The materials are readily available in the dime stores and this will be a pleasant, easy and rewarding craft project for young girls in 4-H or Girl Guide groups.

Cotton embroidery floss has a slight lustre, which will give the bracelets a satiny sheen and there are a wide choice of colors available. It is a good lesson for the girls to select colors which compliment each other, such as the autumn shades of russets and browns or whatever colors match or contrast with their favorite dress.

Remove the labels from the floss and find the end. To keep the thread from tangling during handling, wrap it around a small fold of paper. Hold the end of the thread against the bracelet and wrap the thread around the bracelet several times to secure the end, wrapping as tightly as you can.

Continue winding over the bracelet and if you wish to graduate or change the color, hold the second color against the bracelet and wrap the first color around it, continuing to wrap until the second color is secure. Then begin to wrap with the second color, wrapping over the end of the first color. Using this technique you can change colors several times.

When you have finished wrapping the entire bracelet, cut the threat about 8 inches from work, thread thro' a needle and pass thro' the wrapped bracelet until you feel the end will be secure and clip.

This week's pattern is a knitted raglan cardigan or pullover with a very interesting herring bone pattern or fronts, back and sleeves. Shown are the cardigan with round or V-neck styles in average or tunic length. The pullover features the round neat ribbed neck-line or the high turtleneck style in either average of tunic length. Directions given on the one Leaflet are for sizes 12 to 18, bust sizes 32 to 38 inches. Knitted with a knitting worsted weight of wool. Just what is needed for the cool Fall days ahead!

To order Leaflet No. 7008, send 75 cents plus a stamped self addressed envelope, long one if possible. If you do not have a stamp or envelope, please enclose an extra 25 cents to cover the cost of handling and print your name and address. Send to: May E. MacLean, Knit and Chat c/o Victoria Times, 2621 Douglas St., Victoria.

Please be sure to state pattern numbers correctly when ordering and to enclose your stamped return envelope for faster service. Allow two weeks for normal delivery. All back numbers of my series are available price 75 cents each, catalogue of Gift and Bazaar Items is 25 cents. All orders must be accompanied with a stamped return envelope or an extra 25 cents.

Confusing myths surround epilepsy

DR. L.L. COLEMAN

YOUR HEALTH

by L. L. Coleman, MD

My daughter has epilepsy. She works with other girls who know she has this condition. The bosses know it, too. With the medicine she has been taking she hasn't had an attack in four years. Yet she feels that everyone thinks of her as "different."

Mrs. J.E.

Dear Mrs. E.:

Epilepsy has always been encased in a confusing array of myths, superstitions and prejudices. It is a deplorable reflection on our civilized, educated society that there are still occasional evidences of discrimination against epileptics. They are sometimes denined jobs and admission to schools and colleges. In some states, they were once even denied the right to marry and have a family.

Yet today few medical conditions are as gratifyingly controlled as are epileptic seizures and convulsions. Under constant medical guidance, many epileptics may never again experience another seizure.

Epileptics have conquered their handicap and have learned to live in dignity as creative and productive members of society.

The thought occurs to me that it is perhaps your daughter who considers herself "different" while the people have forgotten that she has a history of epilepsy, especially since she has not had an attack in four years.

In general, society's attitudes about epilepsy have emerged from the dark age of misconceptions. The courage of epileptics is immeasurably enhanced by understanding on the part of those who surround them.

Perhaps your daughter would benefit by psychological support. It would help build up her self-esteem and image. It would eradicate any thoughts that she might have about being "different."

Keeping windmill power flowing is no breeze

By ASTRID RONNING

NEW YORK (NYT) — The most original wedding gift I received was a windmill, a present from my husband Frank, which we installed to generate electricity for our home. Occasionally, it does.

Our backyard power plant is a Dunlite 2,000-watt wind generator with three 10-foot blades mounted atop a 60-foot Rohn guyed tower. It all looks very much like a television transmitting station with three starched flags at the top.

One cannot, however, simply put up a windmill and plug in the toaster: We have 19 six-volt storage batteries (to hold the electricity cranked out by the windmill); a 2000-watt inverter (to convert the direct current coming from the windmill to alternating current, which is normal for household use); and a 2K Onan propane gas generator (to be used as our backup source of electricity in the unlikely event wind power is not enough). Actually, I understand none of it.

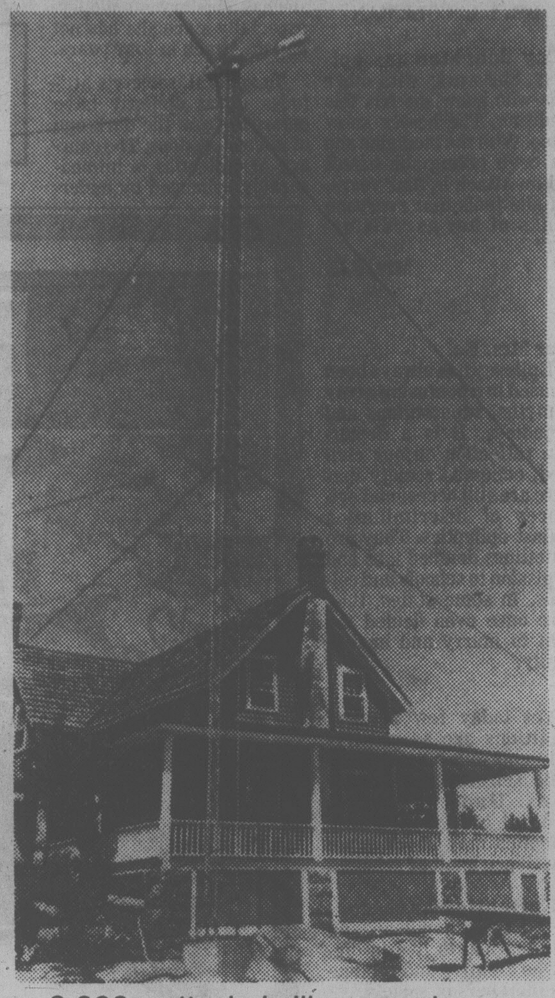
April, 1978:

We are lulled to sleep every night by the gentle whirring outside the window. We delight in showing off our energy system and explain in great detail how it works to anyone mildly interested. One day the inverter doesn't click on automatically as it should and we are directed by the specialists to hit it with a rubber mallet until it does. We do. It does.

May, 1978:

It seems that even with a windmill, one should try to conserve power. Our life becomes circumscribed by how much current we use. We begin shutting off the refrigerator overnight. Using my electric curlers calls for advance planning and I discover one morning that they can, in an emergency, be heated in a vegetable steamer over the gas stove.

A light negligently left on becomes the leading topic of discussion at the dinner table and from now on we are to plug lights into only the direct current outlets.



2,000-watt windmill powers home

This gives us straight windmill power, avoiding the inverter and saving the two whole amps it uses clicking itself on. As a result, we develop headaches reading by the fluctuating light that surges in accordance with the variable winds.

June, 1978:

The bills finally come in for the windmill and are enormous. "1 Jar of Vaseline" for $2 is curiously listed beneath "1 Wind Energy Conversion Plant" for $8,235. We are advised by our accountant that although we might be eligible for a tax break on our wood stoves and new insulation, a windmill deduction is not yet possible. He further urges Frank, an actor, to accept the next part offered. Frank spends most of the month doing a movie in Japan and I cope with voltmeters and capacitors, reading the daily water levels in each of the 19 batteries.

July, 1978:

There is no wind, and none of any significance is predicted. To keep the refrigerator going we have to use our gas generator full time. It needs a complete oil change every 35 hours of running time and we are at a loss as to where to dispose of the gallons of used motor oil collecting on the back porch.

It uses up propane gas faster than we get it delivered, so we must juggle the 100-pound tanks from shore ourselves. The noise is unbearable. Summer guests seeking a glimpse of island paradise are given the choice of shouting over the racket with ice in their drinks or having a quiet conversation over a mug of warm beer.

August, 1978:

The electrician is making house calls three or four times a week. The diagnosis is that the inverter is too powerful for the refrigerator, and this, along with the lack of wind, explains why our system isn't working at full capacity, let alone any capacity. The gas generator, long overtaxed, can now only be started by disconnecting the automatic start wires, holding the gas switch in the "on" position, and thumping the circuit box with a two-by-four.

September, 1978:

The night before our Labor Day party, the gas generator, with a final death rattle, falls apart. We have food for 50 in the refrigerator, so must boat to shore for bags of ice. A phone call reveals that the generator can probably be repaired for $500; after the repairman takes a look we're told we'd be better off buying a bigger one for $900.

Frank, in a fury, spends four days tracking down the windmill specialists. He tells them that if they had installed the right system, we wouldn't be having these problems, and that until they correct the mistakes he won't pay them the $2,000 still due. They announce their intention to sue.

October, 1978;

We are now living out of coolers and ice buckets and the house hasn't been vacuumed in two months. We are childishly not speaking to the windmill people, nor they to us.

November, 1978:

While letters fly back and forth between lawyers, we close up the island and make our usual move to a sublet on shore for the winter. Frank is rude to a total stranger who says cheerfully, "So how's the windmill working?".

It is now summer of 1979 and we are again living on the island, having reached a tentative agreement with the windmill specialists. They replaced our inverter with a smaller, less powerful one and rewired and converted a refrigerator to run on direct current.

We have been assured in great technical detail that this new arrangement should solve all our problems. The smaller inverter, however, cannot handle our few appliances; to iron or set my hair, the gas generator must be used.

For the amount of money we've spent so far on the windmill project — more than $12,000, including electricians' bills, maintenance costs, lawyers' fees and gas for the generator — we could have paid for three electric lines from shore and had the convenience of being able to run the refrigerator and the vacuum at the same time.

Sticky bands help control moths

GARDENING
Jack Beastall

Over the past few weeks I have talked with several home gardeners who were seeking some kind of sure control for the Winter Moth which has defoliated most fruit trees and some ornamentals for the nearly ten years in our area and has spread east and north over the Saanich Peninsula.

As most gardeners are aware, the sticks bands are at present considered the best and safest control to use in the home garden.

Those who have contacted me have used these bands, or the sticky substance that is applied to the bands, and the general reaction is that they may do some good but could hardly be considered a satisfactory form of control.

Unfortunately, no records have been kept of the number of moths trapped on these bands, and many of the gardeners neither checked or replaced the bands after the initial application.

There is nothing new about applying band traps to trees to prevent climbing insects from reaching the upper parts to lay their eggs.

During the First World War at the age of seven I was helping my father make and apply tree bands, and my job was to check them twice a week.

In those days they were called Grease Bands because we used the heavy axle grease manufactured for waggon wheels. This was smeared on bands made from heavy brown paper or rag paper, and tied with string for easy removal and replacement.

Since petroleum products can damage tree bark, the bands were checked every day during the warmer temperatures of fall to see that the grease did not liquify and run down the tree trunk.

The same checking is needed with today's bands, not for liquifying but to determine that the surface has not dried in temperatures such as we had at the beginning of this week. If the surface loses its tackiness it is useless as an insect trap, and must be recoated.

These bands will not only trap the female Winter Month, they also trap spiders, earwigs, ants, flies, and any other insect which tried to go up, or come down, the tree trunk.

When a quantity of insects have been trapped it is possible for the female winter moth to walk over the carcasses as easily as walking up a bare trunk, and this is one reason for the poor control gardeners speak about.

During September and October I have found it necessary to replace the sticky bands every second week, and about once in three weeks through November and December, or until the moths have gone.

The winter moth lays her eggs near the dormant growth buds on the branches of the trees so that the young grubs will have a plentiful supply of tender green leaves and flower buds by the time the eggs hatch, which is when the temperature is a little higher than needed to activate the growth buds.

The tiny grub grows rapidly as it feeds, and when full size it drops to the ground on a fine thread.

When the caterpillar reaches the soil it burrows under the surface and pupates for the summer. Frequent cultivation beneath the perimeter of the branches will lessen the number of moths the following fall.

The caterpillars drop over a period of three to four weeks, and appear as moths at any time from mid-September until December, usually on a clear frosty evening just after sundown in our area.

The male moths, which fly, are seen on lighted window panes and around any outside lights. The female moths, which have no usable wings for flying, climb trees, fences, buildings, and tall plants after mating, seeking a suitable place to lay eggs.

After the first females appear the sticky bands may need replacing every day until the main infestation is over.

As a precaution, gardeners familiar with sticky bands apply one band about 18 inches above soil level and another 12 inches higher on the trunk. When the surface of the lower band is filled with female moths, the second band traps those that reach that level.

Bands can be made from brown paper shopping bags cut in strips about 12 inches wide and joined with tape to make a double wrap around the trunk. One end of the paper is attached with three carpet tacks then stretched around the trunk and tacked, or tied with string top and bottom.

On trees having a rough bark the cracks in the bark must be filled to prevent the insects or moths from crawling beyond the trap through the cracks. Cotton batting was used when it was cheap to buy, but today the soft plastic vegetable bags are torn into pieces and stuffed into the cracks with a screwdriver or piece of wood. Over this it is wise to put a paper or plastic band to keep the filling in place when the sticky band is renewed.

Some gardeners use a heavy polythene sheeting cut into strips for bands instead of brown paper. The sticky substance is painted on the bands about six to eight inches wide, leaving 2 inches of bare band at the top and bottom.

To have success with sticky bands requires constant attention from the home gardener from mid-September until December. It is not a simple matter of applying the substance to the tree bark and figuring the job is done.

When the male moths appear on the lighted windows, a trip around the garden with a flashlight will reveal hundreds of the female moths swarming on the base of tree trunks awaiting the males. Many of these can be destroyed by rubbing the trunks with a piece of old sacking. Any that fly away are male moths.

Two predators have been released in selected areas, a fly and a small wasp. If climate and other conditions are suitable it will take about two years for these to multiply sufficiently to form a viable control. In the mean time the sticky band, properly applied and frequently replaced, should give a good measure of protection.

WEEK'S WORK

By JACK BEASTALL

Take under cover, screened soil from compost heap for winter and early spring pot work, seeding in flats, coldframe and for greenhouse work.

Early apples and pears — pick from trees carefully; fallers will not keep more than a day or two. Late keeping varieties are left until later in October. Exact picking date varies with year; can be obtained from Ministry of Agriculture, Horticultural Branch.

Lift potatoes as tops wither. Choose dry day; spread in open air for few hours before storing. Store in dark, cook frost-free place.

Lift late onions. If not completely ripened or have started growing again with late watering, use in next few weeks.

Figs — pick late fruits when ripe. Only full sized ones have chance of ripening now. Remove all smaller figs including the tiny dots appearing in axils of leaves. These do not continue growing next spring, and inhibit approaching dormancy.

Polyanthuses, violas, pinks may be divided and replanted into spring flowering beds. Use well rotted compost in holes. Also put in wallflowers if not already done; need long rooting and growing season.

Brits purge perks

LONDON (CP) — Towering British executives may be bidding farewell to their beloved Jaguars and Rovers as a determined Tory government stakes its battleground for a war against "perks."

Sir Geoffrey Howe, chancellor of the exchequer, is trying diligently to wean a nation hooked on perquisites, in keeping with government strategy to reduce income taxes and improve incentives.

Britain leads the world in the provision of fringe benefits to employees and it is an inefficient, wasteful and unjust way of rewarding effort, says Howe.

"I have no doubt that it would be much better to get back to paying people in cash, so giving people the freedom to spend their income as they choose," he says.

More than 65 per cent of the new cars registered in Britain are bought by companies. Eighty per cent of senior management use company cars.

If new government proposals are implemented, taxes on company cars would substantially increase, though not effective until the 1981-82 financial year.

But pressure from the business community coupled with loss of middle-class support may mellow the determined chancellor.

Howe wants to abolish the earnings threshold, at present £8,500 ($22,525), below which benefits are not taxed, as well as adding the value of benefits to wages and salaries each payday before deducting tax at source.

More work than don't

By AB KENT

Canadian researchers will toil on a frozen sea in darkest December to help initiate what could become an Arctic ice forecasting program.

Scientists from the Institute of Ocean Sciences at Patricia Bay expect to participate in the program.

The project is a joint undertaking of the federal Atmospheric Environment Service, a private contractor and two Calgary oil companies — Dome Petroleum and its subsidiary, Canmar Drilling.

Intera, also of Calgary, is the private contractor taking part in the offshore remote sensing project covering 100,000 square kilometres of the Beaufort Sea.

The AES will process data to build a regional computer model of the sea, attempting to predict ice conditions where oil drill ships, supply tenders and tankers may soon be operating.

Intera will extract similar data to build a computer model of a small scale area where equipment such as a drilling platform may be located.

Members of the frozen sea research group at the Institute of Ocean Sciences expect to be involved in developing the regional model with AES and also hope to run an oceanographic helicopter survey in conjunction with the December field work.

Dr. Lyn Lewis, head of the frozen sea group, said formation and movement of sea ice is not well understood.

Two medium size aircraft will be flown over the ice, each scanning with a different type of radar at an altitude of about 5,000 feet.

From the air, all ice looks the same, but on radar the images received and recorded for analysis will vary, telling scientists the difference between thin, first-year ice that ships might negotiate and thick, multi-year ice, to be avoided.

"If it works it will be a very valuable tool for these people working offshore," said Lewis.

Lewis said when it is considered that each offshore well costs about $40 million and the cost of the research project is around $1 million, the companies will be getting a bargain.

The oil companies, who will be bearing the brunt of the cost, will provide the recently acquired icebreaker Kigoriak as the base receiver for data transmitted from the aircraft.

Lewis said the SAR system is so refined that at high altitudes it can give an identifiable image for objects or earth features down to three metres in size.

Before the judge

Three members of the Bounty Hunters motorcycle club were granted bail Friday in Victoria provincial court.

Brock Douglas Flett, 32, of 840 Victoria, David Dean Krenbrink, 22, of 511 MacAuley, and Daniel David Purgaj, 20, of 965 Hillside, are jointly charged with two counts of assault causing bodily harm and one count each of unlawful confinement and possession of a shotgun dangerous to the public peace.

The trio were charged in connection with an incident Wednesday night which started out in Victoria and ended in Saanich in the 3500-block Quadra.

Judge Fred Green ordered the release of all three men on $4,000 recognizance but also required surety bail of $1,000 for Flett and Krenbrink.

All three men were remanded until Oct. 9 for election of their trial method.

Crown counsel Wayne Smith said a resident of a condominium apartment block at 929 Esquimalt heard noises in an underground parking lot on the afternoon of Sept. 12.

When she got there, Smith said, she saw two youths siphoning gasoline. She asked the pair to wait while police were called and they complied.

While waiting for the arrival of police, Smith added, they put the gasoline back in the vehicle from which they were stealing.

Green handed out the jail sentence after learning that Bell was convicted of theft over and under $200 Nov. 27, 1974 and theft under $200 May 2, 1977, both times receiving suspended sentences and a year's probation.

A 19-year-old Qualicum youth, Brian Earl Mitchell, elected trial by judge without jury on a charge of possession of morphine for the purpose of trafficking and a preliminary hearing date of March 3 was set.

Mitchell was also released on $1,500 recognizance with one surety or cash deposit of $500.

Pot traffickers jailed 30 days

Two former Hamilton men were sentenced in county court Friday to 30 days in jail for trafficking two quarter-ounce baggies of marijuana on Sept. 5 to an undercover policeman for $45.

Richard John Earl, 19, and Darrell Robert LaLonde, 20, pleaded guilty.

Judge Peter Millward said he wouldn't lecture them but it was their choice to be treated as criminals or as citizens.

Both men have criminal records. LaLonde has committed nine offences, including thefts, break-in, failure to appear in court, possession of stolen property and possession of marijuana. Earl has committed three offences — break-in and theft, robbery and being unlawfully at large.

Bail denied to 2 men held in drugs swoop

But the door was left open for defence counsel Patrick Sweeney to make a further application when Anderson also adjourned the matter.

If it comes up again, it will likely to be heard in Vancouver.

Denied bail and remaining in custody are Segiundo Quinomes-Landasuri, 34, and Severo Guerrero, 46, both from Buena Ventura, a coastal city 350 kilometres southwest of Bogota.

Details given during the bail application cannot be published because the defence has exercised its right to a ban on publication of the evidence given pending the county court trial.

The trial is not expected to be held until the spring or early summer, following a preliminary hearing in provincial court in November and December.

The two men are among 23 accused of conspiracy to import marijuana, importing marijuana and possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking.

All were arrested after police and armed forces swooped in May 22 on two vessels, the 51-metre freighter Samarkanda and the 16-metre Whitecap, in Sydney Inlet, 32 kilometres northwest of Tofino.

Police seized 640 100-pound bales of marijuana. All but a small portion kept for court purposes was burned in the North Cowichan municipal incinerator.

Gassing studied

LONDON (AP) — Under pressure from British animal lovers, Agriculture Minister Peter Walker has announced an investigation into the mass killing of badgers to protect cattle from the spread of TB. About 3,500 badgers have been killed with cyanide gas in southwestern England in the last four years.

Taped drunks' evidence seen

The conference was attended by 85 prosecutors, about half the total in B.C., Nick Lang of Victoria, immediate past president, said Friday.

A pilot project using video tapes of driving drunks in Vernon is being expanded to other areas, including Saanich.

The prosecutors passed a resolution asking the attorney-general to establish a fixed number of positions per year for further education for prosecutors to do advanced studies. Such a program exists in the corrections branch of the attorney-general's ministry.

The prosecutors also want the government to pay their annual membership in the B.C. Bar Association, which Lang said averages $500.

Six new directors were elected, including Steve Stirling of Port Alberni. They, with Lang as immediate past president, will elect the new president.

CHURCH NEWS

Iran government intervenes

Baha'i shrine saved

Iran government intervention has stopped the wrecking of a house in Iran held sacred by the Baha'i world community, according to Bill Skuce of the Victoria Baha'i Church.

Police guards were posted around the House of Bab, a central figure of the Baha'i faith.

"Extensive damage was done, including the destruction of the roof and walls of the room where the Baha'i faith began," said Professor Jameson Bond, an executive officer of the national spiritual assembly of the Baha'is of Canada. "All the doors and windows in the lower storey are gone, and many walls throughout the house have been torn down."

"Violence by fanatics in Iranian society has characterized the century-long persecution of the Baha'i faith," said Bond. "Several months ago all Baha'i properties were confiscated by the Iranian government which assured Baha'is in writing that the seizure was for the purpose of protecting these sacred properties."

When the House of Bab was first attacked by a crowd of more than 100, including 25 armed revolutionary guardsmen, anguished protests were made by the Baha'i world community to the government of Iran.

Yom Kippur Sunday

Just before sunset Sunday, Jews throughout the world will gather in synagogues for the sacred Kol Nidre service of Yom Kippur (Day of Atonement), the holiest day in the Hebrew calendar.

The high holy day of Yom Kippur falls on the 10th day of the Hebrew month of Tishri and is considered the most solemn day of the year because penitence, prayer and charity can alter a life of evil.

Thus, the 24-hour period from sundown Sunday to sundown Monday is spent by Jews in fasting, prayer and committing oneself to a better life.

The ancient Kol Nidre prayer chanted in the synagogue on the eve of Yom Kippur is a declaration that all vows and promises made by man to God and to himself during the past year which may have been overlooked, become null and void.

Vows and promises made by man to his fellowman, however, are not voided by the Kol Nidre, since broken promises are a great transgression under Jewish law.

During the Yom Kippur morning service, excerpts from the prophets are read in the synagogue. In particular, the Book of Jonah, sent by God to preach at the wicked Assyrian city of Nineveh, is chanted. The lesson of Jonah is recalled on Yom Kippur to remind Jews that there is no escape from God on the Day of Atonement.

The final service of the Yom Kippur Day is called the Ne'ilah (closing) service. It is chanted just before sunset, when it is believed that the gates of heaven open for prayer during the Ten Days of Penitence, the period from Rosh Hashanah (Jewish new year) to Yom Kippur.

In Victoria at historic Congregation Emanuel, 1461 Blanshard, Rabbi Harvey Markowitz will chant the Kol Nidre service beginning at 6 p.m. Sunday. Markowitz will speak to the congregation on the topic Kol Nidre—Mah Nishtanah—Why is This Night of Kol Nidre Different?

On Yom Kippur Day, Monday, the daylong services will also be chanted by the rabbi, beginning at 9 a.m.

Markowitz will address the congregation before the Yiskor or memorial service on the topic: Only Six Months, Only Six Months.

The Ne'ilah service and the blowing of the Shofar (ram's horn) will begin at 6 p.m.

Could rosary forestall calamity?

Sunday, Oct. 7 is the anniversary of Our Lady of the Rosary, commemorating the victory in the famous battle of Lepanto in 1571. Sooke Road resident Al Shepherd of the Rosary Confraternity, a worldwide group which pledges to say the rosary each day, outlines the significance Catholics place upon this anniversary.

Rosary shrine at Shepherd's home

Will the rosary prevent the great catastrophy of the 20th century? If world history is an indicator then it is unlikely that this heavensent prayer will be practised to the extent requested by the Blessed Virgin Mary.

The rosary was first received by the church from St. Dominic as a powerful means of combating sin. Unfortunately, the practice of this devotion died out in one century and was forgotten.

Failure to continue with the practice of the Virgin's prayer brought upon mankind God's wrath in the form of the black plague. For three years, beginning in 1349, the whole of Europe suffered under the scourage of the worst plague ever known; hardly one man in a hundred lived to tell of it.

In 1460 the rosary came back into use through the preaching of the Blessed Allen de la Roche, who also received his instructions from the Blessed Virgin.

The tiny French village of La Salette, in the year 1846, was chosen as the scene for many appearances of Our Lady who begged for more prayer, especially the rosary, to prevent another scourge from heaven. She warned a famine and a plague would quickly follow if her pleadings were unheeded.

History confirms the failure of mankind to take to heart Mary's warning and her plea for the rosary, for in the following three years more than 800,000 died of starvation due to failure of the potato, wheat and grape crops in Europe. The plague took a heavy toll of children.

It is believed by some that these tragedies should serve to emphasize a far greater catastrophy spoken of by Mary in the 1846 apparitions—a catastrophy to take place in the last half of the 20th century, in which two-thirds of mankind will perish.

Mary, in her hundreds of recent visitations, has confirmed the catastrophe to be of two parts. One-third of mankind will die in a short but terrible war, and one-third will be destroyed by a tremendous ball of fire of supernatural origin.

To insure that some will survive, the Blessed Virgin has made in excess of 500 appeals during the last 20 years in her loving efforts to save a thankless generation.

The rosary could forestall and perhaps appease God's anger and those who survive will no doubt have made some effort to accomplish this.

City priest honored

The Bishop-elect of the Anglican Catholic Church of Canada, Rev. C.J. de Catanzaro of Ottawa, announced during the first synod held in Winnipeg that Father Roland Palmer, SSJE, would be appointed honorary archpriest in recognition of his outstanding service to the Anglican Church, both in Canada and the U.S.

Palmer, often referred to as the "father of the 1958 Revised Anglican Book of Common Prayer," now resident in Victoria and assistant priest in the local parish of St. Athanasius, is currently conducting a series of lectures on The Psalms for the Greater Victoria Lay School of Theology.

Presbyterians rally

Rev. David and Mrs. Smith of Knox Presbyterian Church and six other Knox church members are in Banff, Alberta, this weekend attending the 1979 Presbyterian Conference.

The conference theme, The Christian Family Connection, will give people an opportunity to develop ideas to help congregations become family centres of concern, communication, and commitment.

THE SALVATION Army is conducting special meetings at Oak Bay Secondary Saturday Oct. 6 at 7:30 p.m. and Sunday, Oct. 7 at 10:45 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. to honor the visit of Commissioner Eva Burrows to Victoria.

Commissioner Burrows, an Australian, has served in Britain, Rhodesia and Sri Lanka, where she lately was territorial commander.

She will speak at the Sunday services and deliver a special report on army work at a missionary rally at 3 p.m. The congress begins at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 6 with a Festival of Praise.

GUEST SPEAKER at Knox Presbyterian Sunday will be Rev. Frank Morley, PhD. Morley, former columnist for the Colonist, now retired in Victoria, has held pastorates in Bermuda, Calgary and Whiterock.

Church chronicles

GRACE LUTHERAN will show the film Pilgrim's Progress on Saturday, Oct. 6, at 7:30 p.m. at the church at 1273 Fort.

EMMANUEL Baptist Church is sponsoring a parent enrichment seminar on Saturday, Oct. 6, from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. Seminar leader will be Mrs. Betty Chase, who did specialized graduate work in family life at Talbot Theological Seminary.

Her topic will be You Can Discover God's Pattern for How to Discipline and Build Self-esteem in Your Child. Cost is $15 for one and $25 per couple. All are welcome but early registration, at 592-2418, is desired.

SEVEN YEARS have passed since Victoria Alliance Church moved to a new edifice at 1792 Townley and Sunday the congregation holds a "mortgage-burning" celebration of praise during the 7 p.m. service.

Former pastor Graham Clark, under whose ministry the sanctuary was erected, will take part along with Rev. Gordon Fowler, superintendent of the Canadian Pacific district of the Christian and Missionary Alliance, who will bring the keynote address.

The congregation has grown to a church family of 200 and ministers to the needs of all ages through the church school and other organized activities.

THE REGULAR quarterly meeting of Metropolitan United Church Women will be a Thanksgiving meeting in the chapel Monday at 11 a.m., to be followed by a sacrificial luncheon in Pendray Hall. Proceeds from the luncheon will go toward the refugee fund.

THE THEME The Life that is Worth Living will be the topic of a speech by Rose M. Hennicker-Heaton of Boston, Mass., at First Church of Christ Scientist, 1205 Pandora, Oct. 14 at 3 p.m.

A TALK on native rights, political and cultural, will be given at St. Andrew's Hall, 1002 Pandora, Oct. 3 at 7:30 p.m. Rev. Terry Anderson of the Vancouver School of Theology will deal with the question: How should non-native Canadians respond to claims of political and cultural rights by native people?

FIRST UNITED's congregational family service at 11 a.m. Sunday will be a special Harvest Thanksgiving—not to be confused with Thanksgiving Sunday.

Churchgoers are asked to bring one harvest gift—a potato, tomato or fruit—to be placed at the front of the sanctuary near the communion table on arrival. The gifts will be distributed to the Upper Room Christian outreach mission on Johnson.

College must pay off 3 released driving instructors

KAMLOOPS (CP) — A three-man arbitration board has ruled that Cariboo College will have to award money to three driver-education instructors who were released when the course was dropped in 1978.

However, a college spokesman said the instructors will have to wait for the money until the college can interpret the board's directives.

Bob Miller, college industrial relations officer, said details of the settlement are vague and the college will ask for clarification.

Cariboo College started a driver-education program in 1972 and the instructors were hired under contract.

Miller said the college was told that the Teamsters wanted to assimilate the drivers into the union.

Shortly after that, the Canadian Union of Public Employees was certified by the board as bargaining agent for the drivers.

While negotiations between CUPE and the college were under way, the course was dropped because not enough people registered.

City land deal with Sally Ann criticized

By NORMAN GIDNEY

A lower Yates Street restaurant owner has complained that the new Salvation Army building to be built soon at Yates and Wharf Streets is not esthetically pleasing and is completely incompatible with the local buildings in the area.

Jean-Pierre Mercier, proprietor of Chez Pierre at 512 Yates, also claims the city sold property on Wharf to the Salvation Army without public approval or going to tender.

He offered to buy the property — now a parking lot at Yates and Wharf — but was never told the sale was going through, he says.

A copy of a letter sent by lawyer George F. Jones on his behalf to city council on Tuesday was made available to the Times.

"Obviously, the city should be embarrassed," Jones says in the letter.

"If indeed you have sold this property, you have certainly not sold the taxpayers' property to the highest bidder or for the best use that was available for it," the letter said.

"Furthermore, your officials and the officials of the Capital Regional Board have not stood up to the written promises they made to the writer or to the proprietor of Chez Pierre Restaurant Ltd."

However, a city hall official said today there was no sale involved, only a swap of city-owned lots at Wharf and Yates for Sally Ann property bordering Waddington Alley at 516 Yates, the present site of its Harbor Light treatment centre for alcoholics — which is next door to Chez Pierre. Actual transfer of title goes ahead sometime in October.

The city set arbitrary values for purposes of the swap — $80,000 for the city lots and $50,000 for the Salvation Army property — which were below market value.

Land commissioner Joe Elkin said the difference amounts to a donation to the Sally Ann's project.

The Municipal Act allows a city to dispose of property in any way it wishes, explained Elkin.

And the city wanted the Waddington Alley property for future improvements in a larger scheme to establish a pedestrian route extending all the way from Bastion Square up to Chinatown. A courtyard is planned for Waddington Alley which will enhance everybody's property, he said.

Elkin also said it was the regional district's co-operation that allowed the whole transaction to go through.

The CRD, with headquarters at 524 Yates on the other side of Waddington Alley, has a 20-year lease for parking purposes on the Yates and Wharf city property, but it agreed to swap this for parking space elsewhere.

"It was through their cooperation that this whole thing is going through," said Elkin.

Lawyer Jones criticized the city's general policy for lower Yates Street.

"Let's face it, you are not only not encouraging the investors who have poured millions and are preparing to pour more millions into this area of the city, you are actively discouraging them.

"Parking is a problem . . . and the traffic problem is horrendous. When people like McQuade's are prepared to risk large sums of money in the area they need your protection and help, not hindrance."

But businessmen and restaurant owners also have a social conscience, said Jones.

"We all have a responsibility not just to make money but to fulfill our obligations to society."

A solution to the problem would be to relocate the proposed detoxification centre north of Chinatown in conjunction with the transit system so patients could ride the bus to the centre for treatment.

Jone said the Yates-Wharf city property could house a hotel which would blend in with the convention centre and protect the area for those investors who have gambled their hopes, fears and monies in the future of Victoria.

jazz

There is enough real talent to justify the mounting of a weekend-long celebration along these lines. The Weather Report concert could open Friday evening, along with combos led by Jan Garbarek (the poll-winning Norwegian saxophonist and composer), Jakob Magnusson (Iceland), Las Irakeres from Havana, and Victor Assis Brasil, the alto saxophonist from Rio.

Brasil's treatment at Monterey still rankles in his memory. After 30 hours in planes and airports, he was thrown into a jam session group backing Junko Mine, where he played for two minutes; the next night he was lumped together with Scott Hamilton, a tenor player, in a Dizzy Gillespie group, playing an unfamiliar tune. This revealed only that he and Hamilton were incompatible with each other and with Gillespie. Such hastily assembled jams do not constitute a showcase for artists of any nationality. A carefully organized World Jazz Festival would do justice to those who have been shortchanged at their U.S. appearances.

A matinee concert Saturday could present the diverse and stimulating keyboard sounds of France's Martial Solal, South Africa's Dollar Brand, Switzerland's George Gruntz, East Germany's Joachim Kuhn, Poland's Adam Makowicz and, of course, Tete Montoliu. America's adopted son, George Shearing, would also qualify. Any one of dozens of Americans such as Keith Jarrett or Hderbie Hancock would add musical and box office value.

A "Violin Summit" Sunday matinee would constitute a similar study in contrasts, with Stephane Grappelli, Didier Lockwood and Jean-Luc Ponty (France), Michal Urbaniak (Poland), Svend Asmussen (Denmark), Papa John Creach (U.S.)

The Saturday evening concert would concentrate on vocalists, with Cleo Laine (Britain) and Sarah Vaughn (U.S.) as main attractions, as well as Flora Purim (Brazil), Urszula Dudziak (Poland), Georgie Fame (Britain), Karin Krog (Norway), Monica Zetterlund (Sweden).

Finally, a Sunday evening jam session unlike those to which we have become accustomed at too many domestic convocations. This would take into consideration the musicians' compatibility, their familiarity with the tunes to be played, and their sympathetic temperaments.

This concert would be brokendown into several groups. The amount of talent available today, without even taking Americans into consideration, is unprecedented. Germany's Albert Mangelsdorff is by all odds one of the two or three most original trombonists currently active. Others firmly established overseas (and in most cases familiar to the U.S. audience at least through records) include Kenny Wheeler (Canada), Enrico Rava (Italy) and Terumasa Hino (Japan), trumpets; Victor Assis Brasil (Brazil) and Zbigniew Namyslowski (Poland), reeds; Gunter Hampel (Germany) vibes; Philip Catherine (Belgium-Britain), Ed Bickert (Canada), guitar; Niels-Henning Orsted-Pederson (Denmark), George Mraz (Czechoslovakia), Dave Holland (Britain), Eberhard Weber (Germany), bass; Daniel Humair (France), Jon Christensen (Norway), drums; Airto Moreira (Brazil), percussion.

This list does not even take into account such long-established names as Oscar Peterson and Toshiko Akiyoshi. It is intended as a reminder of the degree to which the scene has expanded, and of the potential musical validity of a deliberately international slant.

The festival would call for financing substantial enough to ensure maximum media attention, with complete television coverage, critics from five continents, and panel discussions in which they could trade ideas (and possibly blows) with the musicians. In sum, an exciting, all-encompassing weekend, like no previous event in jazz history. The whole weekend could be preserved on video discs; this, too, has never before been done.

How about it, George Wein of Newport? Or George Gruntz of Berlin? Or perhaps some other entrepreneur, looking for a peg on which to hang the jazz festival concept? The idea is yours for what it may be worth, and I hope, for the sake of the insufficiently promoted talents it will help to nourish, that it will be worth a fortune.

Steenburgen and McDowell ponder the perils they face in trapping Jack the Ripper in Time After Time

Clockwork star finds Time

By LES WEDMAN

SAN FRANCISCO — For all lovers there is a perfect time unless time becomes an elusive and meaningless absurdity, which is what happens in the romantic thriller, Time After Time, a love story of high adventure with a decidedly different twist.

In it famed 19th century scholar, author, inventor and prophet, H.G. Wells, portrayed by British actor Malcolm McDowell, is forced to make a sudden and daring journey in his fantastic Time Machine to travel to downtown San Francisco in 1979 in hot pursuit of the criminal genius Jack the Ripper. And while looking for his onetime friend, Wells falls in love with the foreign currency officer at a bank. She is portrayed by Mary Steenburgen and the character's name is Amy Robbins.

Wells fulfills his incredible mission with her help proving that no barrier of time will separate two lovers. Director Nicholas Meyer, who also wrote the screenplay, thinks the story could have happened because in 1895 Wells divorced his wife just months after publication of his instantly-acclaimed novel, The Time Machine, and quickly remarried. His new bride was Amy Catherine Robbins.

In San Francisco, where Time After Time was filmed and where it was having its premiere showing, Malcolm McDowell confirmed that the love bug had bitten him and his leading lady, Mary Steenburgen, too. What started as an on-screen romance ended in the real thing. He is divorcing his wife and Miss Steenburgen says they likely will be married within the year.

"You will love your leading lady," director Meyer told McDowell before the picture started. Said McDowell, now that the picture is finished, I always do what the director says."

McDowell has moved from Britain to Los Angeles because that's where the work is. There's nothing being made in England domestically, only "special effects" movies like The Empire Strikes Back and other horror and space-age films.

He chose to do the H.G. Wells role because "I've always known I could play that kind of character although nobody else did. They still look on me as Alex, the bully boy in A Clockwork Orange." He feels he has been selective in the parts he has done in his 11 movies, starting with the sadistic schoolboy in If. "I can't work on something I don't believe in or can't enjoy."

McDowell likes making films better than acting on stage simply because the pay is better and you're not tied up for such a long time. He likes the idea that Time After Time has made him a "hot property" in Hollywood "so one should take advantage of that."

He says he has not been flooded, but has been getting increasing "charming leading man part offers." But he doesn't like repeating himself, which is why he would prefer to play "a charming killer or a charming hoodlum," he laughs.

Actually Nicholas Meyer didn't pick McDowell for the Wells role first. He wanted Derek Jacoby, the star of I, Claudius. But Warner Bros., which backed the picture, had never hard of him. In casting, Meyer said during conversation, it's a case of finding out who's available, how much they want and who the studio will go for.

When McDowell got the nod, Warner Bros. told Meyer he would have to have Mick Jagger play Jack the Ripper. That, declared the energetic film-maker with a mind of his own, "was the most stupid idea I'd ever heard." The studio backed off. Meyer wanted Edward Fox — of Day of the Jackal fame — because he saw in him the matinee idol type that women would follow down a dark alley to have their throats cut. But Meyer settled for David Warner who was a star at Stratford in England when Malcolm McDowell was a spear carrier. Meyer also picked Mary Steenburgen for Amy only after Sally Field rejected the part.

So it must be fate — a love affair between two people never scheduled to meet. McDowell had never heard of Mary Steenburgen or Little Rock, Arkansas, where she came from. And she had never seen a Malcolm McDowell film.

Flea fare here

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Major Conrad Flaps is an"airman extraordonaire". He truly believes in himself and his ability to get off the ground, but the poor fellow seems always to experience great difficulties.

So does Milton Newcombe, the "brilliant musician." Milton plays the violin badly — very badly. He has failing sight and is tone deaf. That doesn't help.

Nemtin appears next week for the first time in a Bastion Theatre mainstage production as Carlos Homenides de Histangua in the season's opener, A Flea in Her Ear.

He possesses imagination and versatility to an exceptional degree, but what really makes him unique is the fact that he is one of the less than two per cent of people who actually find their "clown." (It is said that every one of us has within him a clown but few people actually discover theirs.)

Nemtin discovered Conrad Flaps during a workshop. The character came from deep within him, but the situations, tricks and dilemmas are dreamed up by Nemtin. He incorporates facets of circus clowning, stage clowning and Comedie del Arte into his act.

Charlie Chaplin and Buster Keaton provide some of Nemtin's inspiration. They are two of his favorites. He says clown acts seldom exceed 25 or 30 minutes due to the high energy level that must be maintained. Also the clown does not wish to lose his audience or tire it with his antics.

Stuart Nemtin began his career years ago as a camp counsellor in Ontario, teaching drama, folk dancing and singing. He studied mime under Ron East in Toronto, a famous clown who himself studied under Jacques LeCoq in Paris.

Nemtin worked one full year with Kaleidoscope Theatre, touring in Digs, Sumidagawa, and The Greatest Little Supershow He also played the violin and acted in Kaleidophonics with the Victoria Symphony Orchestra. He intends to stay with clowning and also work on expanding his career on stage in comedy and dramatic roles.]

Others appearing in Flea which opens Friday at McPherson Playhouse include Bastion artistic director Edwin Stephenson and often-seen Robin Marshall. Also Alison MacLeod, Colin Miller, David Brown and Jack Northmore, all of whom have appeared in previous seasons.

The director is Ronald Ulrich.

Jane Fonda is so fired up over her newest movie, Nine to Five, she's started a crusade for women office workers to organize and defend their rights because, she says, they will suffer most in the future. "We're in a critical period where the pie is shrinking and inflation is rising, and the people who are going to suffer the most are those on the lowest rungs of the ladder — the office workers," she said. The film is a comedy about secretaries who kidnap their boss and take over the office.

She goes for baroque — and our town, too

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Offered two tempting alternatives as to where she should spend the next few years of a distinguished career, Christine Mather did not have to resort to tossing a coin.

She did not really have to wrestle with her decision at all.

It was a question of either accepting the urgent invitation to remain Dean of Music at Sir Wilfrid Laurier University for a second four-year term, or to move to Victoria at Robin Wood's invitation to become Director of Music Administration here at the Conservatory of Music.

Victoria won easily for at least two reasons.

"I had a great urge to return to the west coast (from Ontario)" she says, "and such an enormous respect for Robin and Winifred Wood."

She admits that the vital importance of music conservatories and their scarcity in this country could be counted as another factor.

At any rate, Dr.Christine K.Mather, internationally noted bassoonist, musicologist and administrator, has now become a Victoria Conservatory personality.

Dr.Mather is not encountering this city for the first time. In the four years from 1971 to 1975 she was a member of the University of Victoria department of music.

In the interim between her Victoria sojourns, she has been at Sir Wilfrid Laurier University in Waterloo where she was one of only six Deans of Music in Canada; Wilfrid Laurier's first, and the only woman occupying the position.

One of Dr.Mather's special fields is early music, concerning which she has done much scholarly writing, publishing papers and articles and editing and performing works.

She was director of the graduate program in musicology at UVic and also started a summer series of early music workshops. These drew students from all over Canada and the United States and attracted internationally celebrated teachers. She organized recitals of renaissance and baroque music.

"The response we got to these was tremendous," she says. "People flocked to them and yet at Waterloo when we initiated similar concerts and workshops, there was no public interest at all."

Her return to the west coast was also affected by the knowledge that the Conservatory is soon to move to more spacious and specifically re-designed quarters in the St.Ann's annex building. She sees the move as providing a major opportunity for the conservatory to develop on the provincial and national scene.

She is intently interested in becoming a part of that development.

Mather describes a conservatory as "an incredible asset to a community." Equally incredible is the fact that so few cities in Canada have one, she comments. That includes Winnipeg, the first city she worked in after coming to Canada.

Having worked at three universities — UVic, Manitoba and Waterloo — Mather is able from personal observation to assess broadly the capacities of students entering music programs.

"University music schools are doing their best with material that too often is not properly prepared," she says. "That clearly indicates an urgent need for conservatory training. A conservatory produces great numbers of children well and thoroughly trained at the right age in many phases of music."

The total immersion youngsters receive at a conservatory is of enormous value when they wish to pursue the subject at university level, she points out.

There is a considerable demand for well trained musicians in North America; particularly those who specialize and for orchestral musicians. String players are at a premium around the world.

Diploma musicians from regional colleges, if their training has been thorough, can be optimistic about pursuing a career in music, says Mather.

One of her special duties at the Conservatory will be administration of the Camosun College diploma program for which the conservatory provides all courses. The program encompasses piano (including accompaniment), voice (including opera) and strings. It places emphasis on the training of teachers.

Students working for their diploma must take a main instrument, second instrument, music language, pedagogy, chamber music and master classes which may be in opera, stage work, drama or instrumental performance.

This program is intended for students not prepared to undertake, for financial or other reasons, the four years of university leading to a Bachelor of Music degree. It will enable such students to teach or to be performers or both.

But whatever avenue they eventually follow, says Mather, studying music is a marvellous discipline In one way and another it affects one's whole attitude to life and immeasurably broadens one's capacity for enjoyment.

Christine Mather's early education took place in Scotland. Her first major instrument, which she studied at the Royal College of Music in London and in Vienna, was that baritone voice of the orchestra, the bassoon.

She spent some time as a free-lance bassoonist in London, as a member of Sadlers Wells Theatre Ballet orchestra and with the Carl Rosa Opera orchestra.

She continued her career in Glasgow and then in 1962 left Britain for Winnipeg where she taught and continued performing as a soloist and orchestral player. The following year she created an early music ensemble which became celebrated as the Manitoba Consort.

This ensemble toured widely, not only in Canada but in Britain, the United States, Switzerland and Germany. It was invited to perform at the opening of the National Arts Centre in 1969, at the world-famous Aldeburgh Festival, and to record for CBC, BBC, Radio Suisse-Romande and Hessische Rundfunk.

It was endowed with a large collection of historical instruments, mostly belonging to Mather. Its tours were supported throughout its life by Canada Council grants and it was the proudly acknowledged adopted child of the University of Manitoba where Dr. Mather was a member of the music faculty.

Mather gained her doctorate in musicology from the University of Michigan but in 1975 when she was invited to direct the musicology program at a noted California graduate school, she accepted the position at Wilfrid Laurier instead.

During her four years there, admissions doubled and applications tripled. Concert series were established, instruments including a complete baroque orchestra were acquired and internationally celebrated artists and scholars were appointed to the faculty.

One of her final achievments was the introduction of the first work-study (co-op) program in music in Canada. This attracted a great deal of interest. It meant that selected students were placed in a wide variety of work stuations approved by the faculty and were able to confirm study of their main area in music without interruption all year round.

"The four years was exciting. I found myself in a very competitive situation filled with challenge and stimulation," she says.

Her special area of early music does not in any sense narrow her vision.

"We, and students espcially, have an obligation to accept the music of our century," she says. "More and more is being done by contemporary composers in the field of electronic music. This diverse medium is naturally going to challenge us. Through the centuries changes and modifications in instruments have influenced composers and the opposite situation has also occurred. Think of the emergence of the well-tempered Clavier and then the modern pianoforte ... their effect on Bach, Mozart and Beethoven ... consider development of the horn and other wind instruments.

"There has been progress through the centuries and there has been change. But the two are not necessarily compatible."

"First I would like to make it quite clear that I will not in any sense replace Dr. Wood as the conservatory's principal," she emphasizes. "I will be working closely with Robin and Winifred Wood but Dr.Wood will continue to be active as principal.

"The phenomenal success of this conservatory has been built on the tremendously hard work of a few people and the immense dedication of the Woods and a devoted board of directors.

Dr. Mather says she may do some research and writing as time goes on. She also hopes to influence a closely co-operative relationship among Victoria's cultural organizations.

"In a community this size," she says, "organizations must relate together. They cannot be fragmented without hampering growth and quality."

the galleries

Herbert Siebner's 25 years of residence on Vancouver Island will be celebrated Oct. 3 with an exhibition of his work at the University of Victoria's Maltwood Gallery.

The show will include work in oils, watercolors, sculpture and sgraffito, displaying his development over the two-and-a-half decades spent on Vancouver Island. Born in Stettin, Germany, Siebner studied under Max Kaus in Berlin. A distinct style began to emerge at this period, influenced by expressionism.

Since coming to Canada Siebner has mounted more than 50 one-man shows in major American and Canadian cities and in Berlin. He contributed to the Canadian Biennale of 1958, the International Graphic Exposition of the same year in Lugano, Seattle World's Fair Exhibition of 1962, and the International Triennale of Xilography in Capri in 1969. He has received many national and international awards.

Siebner visited Europe in 1962-63 on a Canada Council Fellowship, studying sgraffito, primitive art and the art of lost cultures.

Following his return from Europe, Siebner developed a greater sense of spontaneity in his work. He has said that he wishes it to look as if it had been made just at that moment or as if it had always existed — or perhaps both.

Robin Skelton of UVic's creative writing department has prepared a biography and criticism of Siebner work that will be published simultaneously with the exhibition opening. This 100 page monograph also contains a full listing of Siebner's exhibitions, publications and awards. The 72 illustrations will include six color plates.

Seventy-five specially bound copies of the monograph will contain a limited edition print (75 only) signed and numbered by the artist, and four extra tipped-in color plates. These may be reserved at $150 a copy.

Two exhibitions of special interest are to open at The Maples Gallery, West Saanich and Keating's Cross Roads, in October. The first will open Sunday Oct. 7 and will consist of an exhibition and sale of potte. y by Robin Righton and Linda Mackie of Swan Lake Pottery.

The show will contain an even balance of decorative and functional wares. It will feature new stylistic and technical departures for the potters, including Saggar-fired raku, drawing with glazes, plates incorporating figurines or landscapes and sculptural pieces.

This exhibition continues through Oct. 20.

On Oct.21 a major exhibition by the renowned Japanese woodcut artist and teacher, Naoko Matsubara, will open.

The up-coming show will feature 27 woodcut prints constituting almost the entire Kyoto series inspired by the artist's memories and observations of her childhood in the old political and artistic centre of Japan.

This week at the Emily Carr Arts Centre, 207 Government, Ilse Greenwald and Edith Emery are showing watercolors, oils, still-life, landscapes and florals in the frontroom gallery. It will run through Oct. 12.

In the backroom "Kitchen" gallery, Rennie Knowlton and Stuart Stark will have a joint display of watercolors and drawings. This show lasts through Oct. 19. Viewing hours for both galleries are Monday through Friday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Early music late Friday

A concert of baroque music will be presented by faculty and students of the University of Victoria school of music in the Music Building recital hall, Friday at 8 p.m.

The program, prepared by Dr. Erich Schwandt, will include early Italian pieces, ranging from the rhapsodic and fantastic through moods of cheerfulness and exuberance to the subtle and devious. There will also be middle baroque pieces concerned with moods of whimsy and madness, the tearful and the sensuous.

Proceeds from this concert will go towards the school of music's early instrument fund. Some items from the collection (started by Dr. Christine Mather during her four-year stay at UVic) will be on display during the afternoon.

Tickets will be available at the door at $3 for adults and $2 for students and senior citizens.

Double option coming

There are back-to-back theatre openings next week. The Belfry launches its first complete season Thursday with Coward's Private Lives, and Bastion Theatre follows Friday with A Flea in Her Ear.

However as both are running over two and three-week periods and both have had satisfactory subscription sales, it's unlikely that they will trip each other up.

Two masters of farce, Feydeau and Coward; one French, the other English. They make a good bi-cultural start for the local professional theatre season, even though one language prevails.

Such is the quality of Private Lives that it delights audiences as much today as it did in the 30s.

The Belfry's guest director for the show is Timothy Bond. This highly successful director has worked at the St.Lawrence Centre, National Arts Centre and Manitoba Theatre Centre and with most of the major theatre companies.

The professional cast includes Sheila Junor-Moore, formerly of Calgary and now resident in Victoria; David Renton, former artistic director of Neptune Theatre, and Brian Torpe.

Resident designer Ken MacDonald has created evocative art deco sets for the production which will run through late October.

Dance display

A Turkish folk dance and culture experience is being hosted by the Saanich International Folk Dancers next week.

Headlining three days of workshops and demonstration is Bora Ozkok. Born in Adana, Turkey, Ozkok came to the United States in the mid 1960s on an athletic scholarship. He attended University of California at Berkeley and was on the All American soccer team in 1968. He has performed folk music and dance with the Turkish National Ensemble and is an accomplished musician on the zurna, a reed instrument that pre-dates the oboe.

The workshops will take place Friday from 8 p.m. to 10:30 p.m.at Uplands School; Saturday, 10 a.m.to noon at UVic Student Union Building, and from 2 to 5 p.m. at Henderson Park Recreation Centre. At the same place the evening will be occupied with a party and dance demonstrations. Sunday from 10 a.m. to noon, there will be another workshop at the Student Union Building.

Rare note on Sunday

Rare instruments from South America are to be heard in two concerts to be given Sunday by Nancahuazu, a group of four versatile South American musicians. Performances will be at 2 p.m. in the University of Victoria Student Union Theatre and 8 p.m. at St.John's Anglican Church, 1600 Quadra.

The quartet will play traditional folk music from the highlands of the Andes.

Instruments include the zampona or Pan flute which is made of two rows of bamboo cane cut to different lengths to create the notes of the pentatonic scale; the antara, another form of pan flute; the tarka, a wooden carved flute, and the charango, a stringed instrument made from the shell of an armadillo.

European instruments such as the harp, mandolin and guitar as well as drums are used in some of the songs. Members of the troupe explain the meaning of each song.

Nancahuazu is currently on a concert tour of North America and is being presented here by the Victoria Chilean Committee with the co-operation of the Victoria International Development Education Association.

Planning a winter getaway? It's hard not to think of the Bay.

There is lots to enjoy in Yucatan

By DAVE RICHWINE

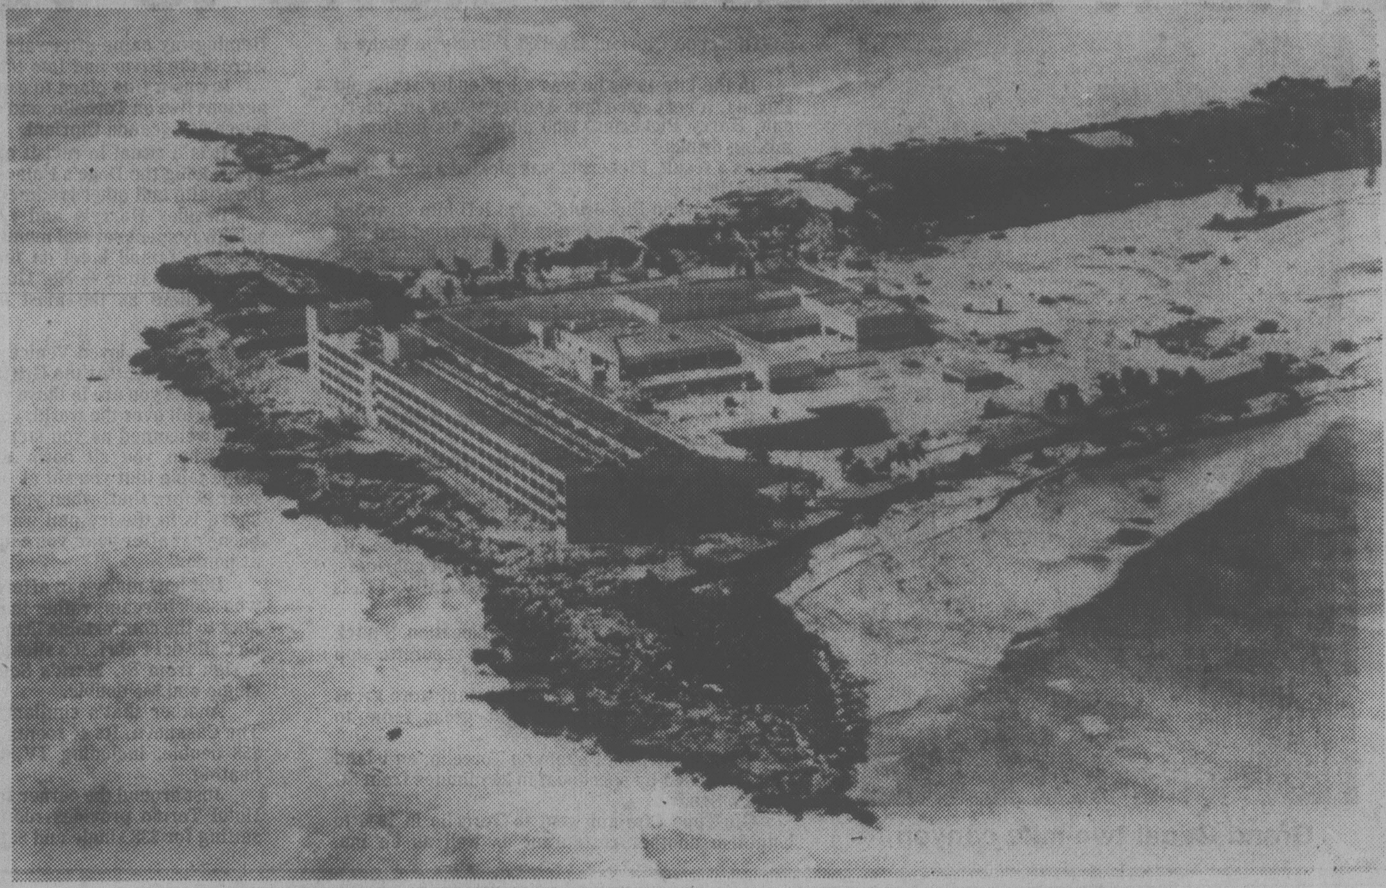
If you're looking for an idyllic laid-back vacation in warm, pleasant surroundings without wall-to-wall tourists, try the still relatively isolated Yucatan peninsula of Mexico.

The Yucatan at its best offers lots of sunny weather, spectacular Mayan ruins, excellent snorkeling spots off its Caribbean coast, tasty seafood and local delicacies, and a fascinating mixture of Indian and Hispanic cultures.

The year-round hot weather means siestas are a way of life. Everyone seems to disappear a few hours each afternoon. And it helps to know at least a little Spanish; nearly no one speaks English.

The terrain on the 200-mile-long peninsula ranges from arid grassland in the north to tropical rainforest in the south. That changing scenery is fun to watch if you rent a car and wing it.

Despite a Mexican government effort which literally built within months the lavish seaside resort of Cancun, where tourists can spend hundreds of dollars per day at luxury hotels, the rest of the peninsula is still not highly developed.



Aerial view of Camino Real hotel on tip of Cancun Island off Yucatan

Near Cancun are the Caribbean islands of Cozumel and Isla Mujeres, both reachable by a short boat ride and much less crowded. They have reefs where tropical fish abound, and the curious are less likely to bump into each other while snorkeling.

The Yucatan has its urban sights, too. Merida is a capital city of 250,000 with quaint narrow streets, some interesting churches, and relaxing parks. Campeche, on the Gulf of Mexico, is a quieter seaport of about 85,000 where the visitor can truly relax and watch the natives.

North Americans will like the Yucatan's prices. The peso was devalued a few years ago and the U.S. dollar still buys a lot. If you pick carefully, you can spend the night in a nice hotel for about $7 per couple, complete with palm trees nearby and an overhead fan.

Outside the cities, a handful of paved highways form a skeletal network connecting the most interesting points on the peninsula. Scattered along these roads are dozens of Indian villages where subsistence farmers live with their families in thatched huts, hunt wild birds, and go into the brush to harvest chicle, the ingredient used in chewing gum.

The biggest historic attractions in the Yucatan are Chichen-Itza and Uxmal. These are two well-preserved majestic cities of the once-great Maya Indian culture, which flourished from before Christ's birth to about 1,200 A.D.

At Chichen-Itza, it's eerie to stand on a deserted grass ball court the size of a football field where Mayan teams battled to knock a rubberlike ball through a stone hoop mounted high on a 35-foot wall.

The Mayas did not know the wheel, but their intricate squarish buildings with modified archways have been described by architectural experts as some of the most beautiful ever created. You can climb pyramids 15 stories high in the Yucatan, visit their astronomy observatories, or search for meanings in the countless stone carvings.

At Uxmal every night there is a light and sound show. The sun-burnt buildings long stripped of their paint seem stark by day, but after twilight they change to brilliant reds, purples, blues, and greens — much as they appeared centuries ago.

If you prefer beaches to history, don't get stuck on a tour bus bound for some of the more decayed ruins. There are literally hundreds of these sites scattered around. They may be fascinating to archeologists, but they are little more than a pile of rocks to untrained observers.

When you get tired of the ruins, you can cool off on white sandy beaches and bright blue waters of the Caribbean, which rival the more popular and expensive resort islands to the east.

There is no shortage of places to stay — from Club Med hotels to cabanas where you can hang a rented hammock for a few pesos.

The food on the peninsula is very tasty, but it's always a good idea to start slowly with the more spicy dishes and stick to bottled water, sodas, beer or tequila.

Revolutionary Cuba boasts tourist rush

In the coming year Cuba expects some 200,000 visitors, and although most of these will be part of chartered tours, there is nothing to stop some of them from coming on their own — if they are prepared to put up with a few bureaucratic problems.

Although some tourists do not require visas, they must make sure they get an exit permit on arrival so they can leave the country. They may also "go as they please" thoughout the country as long as they check into a hotel. Immigration officials will tell tourists they may roam the country at will, but they have to have a hotel residence voucher.

A tourist may, in vain, try to explain that he has been invited to spend a vacation at a friend's home and does not wish to stay in a hotel. But without a residence voucher, he is told, he will face expulsion.

The rule, which immigration authorities say is nothing new, has no official explanation. But hotels fully booked with "ghost customers" who, having paid for their room in foreign currency, go and stay with friends seem to be common. Indeed, some Havana hotels that cater to Cuban Americans on charter tours to visit their relations, are almost empty.

The influx of Cuban expatriates, nicknamed years ago as gusanos (worms), is such that other tourists may find it hard to book a hotel room, as was the case recently with a team of foreign technicians whom their embassy had to put up because of the lack of hotel accommodations.

If parents or a foreigner living in Cuba wish to visit him, and not stay at a hotel, they will have to go to a Cuban embassy before leaving with a letter of invitation from their relative to obtain a permit to reside at his or her home.

Once the paperwork is done, the tourist may freely travel the island on foot, on bicycle or with a coach tour. If he wishes to use another means of transport, such as buses, he will need much patience, and probably wait a good half hour for an overcrowded bus, with passengers hanging from the doors.

Trains and planes are also late or sometimes cancelled. These inefficiencies have been criticized by Cuban President Fidel Castro and this in turn has prompted national debate on the need for better standards both for workers who get to work late and tourists who, to find efficient transportaiton, must keep their fingers crossed.

What a shame it is to come alone to Venice

VENICE, Italy — Seated in Harry's Bar the other day, it occurred to me what a shame it is to come alone to Venice.

It seems a sin, not sharing one of those moonlit moments on the Grand Canal with someone. Or a leisurely stroll through Venice's narrow avenues. Or even a ride in a gondola, as common as that may seem.

In Venice are 400 bridges under which to sail. Yes, and 180 canals. Along the Grand Canal alone are 200 palaces and 10 churches.

ON THE GO with Jerry Hulse

So who cares if the plaster is peeling and the city is sinking?

It's still romantic.

Such moments are hard to play back if one is alone.

This is not to say that Venice is as romantic as some insist it is. In places it is downright tawdry. Yes, and often over-priced. And at night the crazies come out in Piazza San Marco.

Still, Venice's flaws are few — even with the recent horrendous summer crowds. And so Venice remains a romantic place to be. Only not alone.

Queen Elizabeth came to Venice with Prince Philip. Errol Flynn was seen with a hauntingly beautiful creature. And then there were the Hemingways, Ernest and Mary.

Hemingway loved Harry's Bar. After all, Harry's pours the best drink in Venice and provides some of its finest food (the 1979 Guide Michelin gives it its highest possible rating).

It is not by accident that Harry's is known to legions of tourists from St. Mark's to San Francisco, Giuseppe Cipriani labored fiercely to make it so.

Grand Canal two-mile canyon

In the late 1920s he was a bartender at the old Europa. A very good one. And there was an American, Harry Pickering, who adored his method of mixing drinks.

Later when Pickering's aunt left him stranded in Venice, Cipriani took pity on Pickering and lent him money. Pickering went right on drinking until one day he disappeared.

Several months later he resurfaced, repaying Cipriani. At the same time he lent Cipriani the cash with which to buy his own bar.

In gratitude, Cipriani named it after Pickering.

It's been Harry's ever since.

Harry's is a Venetian instittion. It is jammed. Constantly. Even in the morning. It is possibly the most successful restaurant-bar in all Venice. Its menu draws praises from the fussiest of gourmets. It is printed in three languages, daily. (It is also expensive.).

Harry's remains in its original location. Smack on the Grand Canal. Next door to a vaporetto stop (they're the canal "buses").

Hemingway and the elder Cipriani were great friends and the writer brought great fame to Harry's.

The two men met again on Torcello, an island that's reached by speedboat in 20 minutes from St. Mark's Square.

Giuseppe Cipriani went to Torcello in 1936 to establish another restaurant as well as an inn. Hemingway came afterward to work on his novel, Across the River and Into the Trees.

It was a fine place to escape to. Less than 100 persons live on Torcello, and so Hemingway was at peace at Locanda Cipriani.

It is a ritual to revisit old Hemingway haunts after doing the Doge's Palace, the Bridge of Sighs, the Rialto and other landmarks.

Besides Harry's and Locanda Cipriani, Hemingway spent several months at the Gritti Palace, Venice's famed hotel on the Grand Canal. (The Hemingway suite — No. 116 — has been described by hoteliers as the most elegant on the Continent.)

Maugham loved Venice and adored the Gritti. Of it he wrote: "At the Gritti you are not merely a number as you are in those vast caravansaries that appear all over the world; you are a friend who has been welcomed as you step out of the motorboat, and when you sit down to dinner at the very same table that you sat at the year before and the year before that, when you see that your bottle of suave is in the ice pail waiting for you, as it has been year after year, you cannot but feel very much at home."

But how many can afford the Gritti? For those who seek bargains rather than refinement, our vote goes to the comfortable little hotel Patria Tre Rose on Calle dei Fabri. It's slick, it's cheap and it's only a sigh from St. Mark's Square. Rates are $26.50 single and $45 double.

Another that's similarly close to St. Mark's: The Casanova. Its 44 rooms rent for $40 single and $58 double, including TV, telephone and central heating.

Just around the corner from the Gritti the little Hotel Tornio provides rooms and a 13th-century setting for $38 single and $51 double.

Lisbon: Intriguing capital of an interesting country

By JOHN CUMMINGS

LISBON — During the Second World War, the narrow winding alleys that pass for streets provided the backdrop for international intrigue. Every B movie produced in the early '40s portrayed Allied and Nazi agents in neutral Lisbon vying with missions of derring-do, the outcome of which would always "decide the course of the war."

Today, the only courage required in the streets is driving a car through the Barrio Alto, or old section, as the music of the fado — Portugal's soulful music made famous by Amalia Rodrigues — drifts from the cabarets.

It is still an intriguing capital. It has, says one guidebook, the look of San Francisco and the ambience of Rome, with tiny restauarants featuring vintage wine and seafood cooked delicately in olive oil. The only difference is the prices.

While inflation is rising at 35 percent throughout the continent, it is still possible to order a four-course dinner for two with wine and dessert for as little as $10 in Portugal. And a businessman's hotel like the Borges, in the city's business centre and gourmet restaurants, offers single rooms facing out on the busy square for only $12. Portugal is, in short, what Spain was only a few years ago — but is no more.

With the possible exception of Greece, Portugal is the last bargain left in Western Europe. Yet, even by Portuguese standards, prices are 20 percent higher than just a year ago.

Portugal, in fact, offers the best of Europe in microcosm. But it's had its problems.

The country still is recovering from the revolution of April 1974, when the last vestiges of the Salazar regime were overthrown. And then there is a geographic dilemma that squeezes the tiny country of 10 million into the corner of the Iberian peninsula, leaving Portugal out of the mainstream of tourists and grasping desperately for the tourist dollar.

As a result, Portugal is trying hard to please. There are tours that offer a rental car and stays throughout the country in state-run pousadas (the Portuguese equivalent of the Spanish parado).

These tours, ranging from as little as $175 per person for one week, $350 per person for two weeks plus air fare, can be arranged through TAP, the Portuguese airline, or most travel agents. TWA, the only American airline to fly nonstop from New York to Lisbon, offers other tours.

Rates for rental cars are equally attractive, but be advised that, while the tab is low for almost everything else, gasoline costs about $2.50 per gallon — and is going up daily. For some Portuguese workers that can be a day's wage, which explains why the prices of most things are still so low. Your favorite rose, Mateus or Lancer's and even some better ones they don't export, sell for $2 a bottle. But you'll never go wrong ordering the vinho de casa or house wine.

Consider, for example, the cost of jewelry. Earrings and bracelets, made of 19-carat gold (not 14-carat, as in most other countries), can be purchased for as little as $40 to $50. Just about any jewelry store here offers these items, but the fun place to look is in the ancient kalfama, the only section of the city not destroyed by the earthquake of 1755.

The streets here are wide enough only for a horse and wagon, and many are even more narrow. One shop, the Rel'jaria Central on Rua San Miguel, offers unique bargains. (Until recently, the law required that all gold offered for sale be at least 19 carat. Most places still folllow that, but be sure before you buy.) And just across the tiny street is a restaurante tipico, where you are served such Portuguese favorites as caldo verde (a potato and cabbage soup) and grilled sardines along with wines and a caramel custard for dessert. Price for two: about $6.

Lisbon, it is often said, is not the biggest capital of Europe nor the most beautiful.But one need only visit the San Jeronimo Monastery to savor vest-pocket beauty that will match anything Spain has to offer.

And for only about $1 round trip, you can travel by commuter train to the nearby Costa do Sol and the resorts of Cascais and Estoril (the Las Vegas of Portugal). And high above both sits Sintra, where the kings spent their summers in a hilltop palace that dominates the surrounding countryside.

It is a fairly long, and mostly winding, drive to the top, where the Pena Palace is situated. From its ramparts, one can see Lisbon 20 miles to the south, the ocean to the west and the rolling, wooded countryside.

But one of the most unforgettable moments in Sintra is dining in the Palacioa Seteais, a onetime palace converted into a hotel and what may be the best restaurant in Portugal. A close second is not far away on the beach at Guincho, where the pounding Atlantic surf virtually surrounds you as you dine, and from the giant windows of the Guincho hotel you can see the cliffs of Cabo de Roca, the western tip of the European continent. "It makes you want to run out and yell, 'Heathcliff!' " said one diner as the sun set into the Atlantic.

A look at any map will tell you that driving the length and breadth of Portugal would not take a great deal of time. The favorite spot of the vacationers in almmost every season, is the Algarve, in the south. North of Lisbon are countless fishing villages like Peniche and Nazare, just to mention two of the best known. Here you can watch the fishermen mending their nets and their women sitting by the wharf knitting lace. (That material is not as plentiful as it used to be, but is still a bargain here when you can find it.)

Only two hours by car from Lisbon is the walled city of Obidos, a mini-Toledo with a pousada and a fine restaurant, as well as tiny shops that offer fishermen's all-wool sweaters for as little as $15. Obidos has been described as the most picturesque city in Portugal. It is a short distance from the ocean (just about everything in Portugal is) and at the foot of pine-covered mountains, the type that cover much of the interior of Portugal. The landscape is dotted with windmills, sheep herds and friendly people who speak French almost as fluently as their own language. For reasons they will not discuss, they resent being spoken to in Spanish. "Too much history," was the way one Portuguese friend described it. Spain occupied Portugal for about 200 years.

An islet linked to beach Yugoslavian wonderland

By ERIC BOURNE

SVETI STEFAN, YUGOSLAVIA--The wide terrace, 100 feet above the sea, is empty of all but chairs and tables.

Autumn leaves drift by. A last drowsy bee buzzes up and down the sun-warmed glass of the French window.

It is the season's end, the last days of October. But the sky is a flawless blue and the sea a glittering green and silver. The water still is warm enough for swimming.

A last group of tourists arrives briefly before the Hotel Sveti (St.) Stefan closes for a Montenegrin winter as harsh as its summer is generous.

"If you want to enjoy a few more days," says the manager, Milenko Milivojevic, "we'll stay open while the weather holds!" It was tempting.

Sveti Stefan is the imaginative tour de force of a tourism development that made Yugoslavia's Adriatic littoral one of Europe's major playgrounds.

It is an islet linked to the mainland beach by a narrow causeway that often is submerged by winter tides. From ashore, its pink-roofed buildings look so closely clustered that they might easily tumble off into the sea.

Five hundred years ago, the defenders of upcoast Kotor, the big south Adriatic anchorage, asked the local Pastrovici clan for help against the Turks. As reward, the clansmen were given the tiny islet as a permanent fishing settlement. So it remained, part of a prosperous region, until the changes wrought by two European wars.

After the last war, only a score of families resumed habitation. But their homes were so dilapidated and they were so poor that there was little resistance to moving ashore when, in the 1960s, it was decided to turn this little lump of pine- and olive-wooded rock rising from coastal reefs into a tourist resort.

Today, the ancient fishing settlement is a novel, modern hotel complex. The granite walls and the general appearance of the medieval fort built to repel Adriatic pirates were preserved in the rebuilding.

So, too, the sinuous, almost Venetian lanes and stone stairways and Sveti Stefan's chapel, with its delicate bell, whither every second Sunday a priest comes from the mainland to conduct a service for summer visitors.

Admittedly, Sveti Stefan was developed with an eye to tourists with bigger (hard currency) purses. It quickly became an "in" place for movie stars. Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton were early guests, when Burton was playing Tito in the Yugoslav film about the crucial Sutjeska battle.

The place is one for congenial company--and for privacy, too. It provides well-appointed single or double rooms--which, with their terraces and balconies, are more than mere rooms--and dazzling outlooks to the open sea. Some of the doubles are two-floor cottages. There are a few self-contained villas set in their own little Italianate arbors.

Ashore, one can follow the coastline walking through pine woods clinging to the very lip of the cliffs. The management arranges trips in the fascinating Crna Gora (Montenegro) hinterland. "Our drivers," the brochure says, "are very experienced and know well our mountain roads."

One recalls that Bernard Shaw, after a hair-raising tour in the roadless days, said grimly to a local reporter seeking his impressions: "Montenegrin drivers are certainly the best in the world. But they also are the maddest!"

The nearest airport is Tivat (there are frequent daily flights from Belgrade) and coach or taxi takes you the 15 miles to Sveti Stefan. Cars cannot go on the island.

Off-season prices at the Hotel Sveti Stefan are much less than the summer rates (which are about $120 double). A single room in October would be $30 to $35, while a double would cost about $74. There also is a less expensive and fancy hotel called the Maestral; its October rates are $20 to $25 single, $30 to $35 double. An in-between hotel, the Millocher, is only open from May through September.

Manila current centre to get tailoring done

The tailored suits we got in Hong Kong for $50 are now $150. Maybe more. But — "Buy your fabrics in H.K. and stop over in Manila on your way home. Get your tailoring done there."

Friend of mine discovered this. (I've traveled with him all over the world. He's a demon shopper.)

"Manila tailors don't mind if you bring in your own cloth. I had sports jackets made for $15. Slacks for $10.

around the world with stan delaplane

Bush jacket for $10. You can get silk in Hong Kong for $10 a yard that would cost you $30 in the U.S.

"Great hotels now in Manila. As always the weather would boil a lobster but the hotels are air-conditioned.

"Best tailoring shop for men is Chardin. They made jeans for me — cowboy slash pockets and all — for $7. They're denim. They make it in the Philippines. No matter what anybody tells you, denim shrinks. So have the waist made a half inch more than you measure.

"Leave the bottoms unhemmed. Wash them a few times when you get home. Then have them hemmed to the right length."

We've both bought tailored shirts in Hong Kong. "Don't do it again," he says. "At $25 to $30 a shirt, I can do as well from a shirtmaker at home."

High rents push H.K. prices up. The Colony is crowded. Landowners have no mercy on the merchant tenant.

Former British PR about Japan: "Tourist bureaus in the Far East don't advertise it — (and probably will duck if you ask) — but these countries don't want black tourists. The half-black children of the Occupation have mostly gone to Brazil.

"For that matter, Japan doesn't care if it gets ANY tourists. They sell the rest of the world enough that we've all got big deficit balances.

"They've taken steel business away from Britain. After the war, they put in modern mills. The British steel mills are older and not as efficient.

He said: "Japanese really don't like to have any foreigners around. For example, they've taken fifteen — only fifteen — of the boat people refugees. A token gesture."

Update on Baja California. A news writer friend sends the message: "You were right on the Twin Dolphin. Costs $100 a day double, meals included. Swiss chef. OK beaches and a fine pool. Best of all at the tip of the Baja peninsula.

"If the price sounds high, we paid $26 for a motel-like nest in Mazatlan. And it cost $50 a day to eat out. For $24 a day more, the extreme luxury of the Twin Dolphin turns out to be a good value.

"Most hotels are isolated. Taxis will break you. Car rentals at $20 a day plus mileage eat you alive. Nothing much to do in the two small towns anyway."

"La Paloma is the handicraft shop in San Lucas. Locally hand-carved ironwood sharks, eight inches long, cost $61 U.S. (But it's art, baby.)

"Cheapest hotel down here is Mar de Cortez at $16 a day. No meals. Caters to serious fishermen who only want a place to fall down after a day on the sea.

"Hotel Cabo San Lucas and Palmilla, the oldest luxury resorts, go $60, $70, $80 a day. The rich can rent one villa at Hotel Cabo for $700.

"There goes the neighborhood."

Mexico tourist construction looks frightening on paper: on the island of Cozumel and mainland Quintana Roo, $125 million development by an Italian company.

In Punta Banda (north part of Baja) California money will build hotels, motels, golf courses and living rooms for 5000 workers. On the coast of Jalisco, European funds are going into 2,000 hotel rooms and a port for 400 yachts. Cost: $50 million over five years.

"Poor Mexico," said former President Diaz. "So far from God, so near to the United States."

PCB spotted 'just by chance'

Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The spread of the chemical pollutant PCB to human and animal food in 17 states was spotted "just by chance" and could have gone unnoticed under current government procedures, a U.S. Department of Agriculture official said Friday.

Assistant Secretary Carol Tucker Foreman told a House hearing that bureaucratic routine and slipups accounted for the six-week delay between the taking of a food sample that proved to be PCB-loaded and the day that the Food and Drug Administration was notified of the contamination. But "even under the best of circumstances" it would have taken three to four weeks, she said.

The Food and Drug Administration is still tracking down shipments nationwide of cake mixes, wåffle mixes and other products made with eggs that might have contained PCB from a Montana animal feed plant.

The Agriculture Department monitoring system spot-checks animal carcasses and is designed to catch trends over a year-long period, Foreman said. "It was just by chance that we picked up this single incident relatively quickly," she added. "It is also possible that a single incident of this size could go entirely undetected."

She said there are 120 million head of livestock and 3.5 billion poultry marketed each year. "The cost of testing all of them for dangerous chemical residues would be about $100 billion," she continued. Further, she said, there are some dangerous chemicals for which no residue-detecting test exists.

The PCB in this incident was found first in a sample chicken taken routinely from a processing plant in Provo, Utah, on July 6, Foreman related. But the USDA veterinarian who would have mailed the sample to be tested was on vacation and his replacement did not know a sample was waiting, so the mailing was delayed for a week.

On Aug. 3, the USDA inspection office in Alameda, Calif., was told the sample contained PCB but waited until receiving written confirmation Aug. 8 before notifying the Utah office. That office traced the hen to the Pierce plant by the 10th but did not notify the FDA until Aug. 16, six weeks from the day the sample was taken.

Black-white sex sentence delayed for three years

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — A South African judge found a former black beauty queen and her white lover guilty Friday under the country's Immorality Act but deferred sentencing for three years.

The decision came three days after Prime Minister Pieter Botha suggested the twin pillars of South African government's apartheid policy — the immorality and mixed marriage acts — might be changed.

Rosette Veronica Motsepe, 24, Miss Africa South in the 1976 Miss World pageant in London, and Richard Watson, 28, a British immigrant, pleaded guilty in Meyerton Magistrate's Court to charges of interracial sex.

The court ruled they had committed the act at Tedersfield, south of Meyerton, on Aug. 27. Further details were not given because of the guilty plea.

Death site market garden

WINNIPEG (CP) — Jonestown, Guyana, the site of the murder-suicide last November of more than 900 members of the Peoples' Temple cult, now is a market garden, says a Guyanese politician.

Christopher Nascimento says the government of Guyana is maintaining the Jonestown farm site in the northwest part of the country.

The religous cult was carefully checked before being allowed to enter the South American country and begin farming, he says.

"When the thing blew up they were a productive agricultural community," says the minister without portfolio in the government of Prime Minister Forbes Burnham.

Nascimento says his nation is not a haven for far-out religions sects, although his party is supported by another Guyana-based group — the House of Israel, headed by Rabbi Emmanuel Washington, formerly of Cleveland, Ohio. Unlike the Peoples' Temple, the House of Israel is comprised largely of Guyanese.

But Nascimento says it is not unusual for religion and politics to mix in his country.

"The intermingling of religion and politics in Guyana has been traditional for years."

MAILER . . . poses tough questions

Novelist and the killer

By CHRISTOPHER LEHMANN-HAUPT

THE EXECUTIONER'S SONG, by Norman Mailer. Little, Brown. $17.50.

Granted: it's not an ennobling story that Norman Mailer tells in The Executioner's Song, his thousand-page novelistic reconstruction of the life and death of Gary Gilmore. As far as I'm concerned, the story's central figure is a punk, though here I'm at odds with dozens of people in the book who came to love and admire Gilmore while he was waiting to be executed by a firing squad on Jan. 17, 1977, at Utah State Prison. Despite his manifest intelligence and despite being given every opportunity to do so by sympathetic people, he never for a moment showed the slightest insight into why he had committed the murders that led to his execution. And one can't resist the conclusion that for all the courage and steadfastness he displayed in demanding that his death sentence be carried out, he had simply hit on a way of attracting the ultimate in fame and attention.

As for his love affair with Nicole Baker, which the dust-jacket of the book suggests we may regard as "tragic": she strikes one on the whole as being little more than a spaced-out drifter not even capable of looking after her own children. And it is curious to note that the lovers did not truly begin to yearn for each other until after Gilmore's sentence and incarceration. Little is made of the point by Mailer, but he does pause to note certain types of girls who "were more in love with the man they were visiting than the fellow they were living with outside." Before Gilmore's arrest, they were quite incapable of getting along together.

No, in response to the number of pages that Mailer has devoted to Gilmore, one might well echo the Utah reporter who muttered at the presence of CBS-TV and NBC-TV crews:

"Can you believe the attention this cheap punk is getting?" And this leaves aside all the attention Mailer gives to the reporters who infested Gilmore's execution — who swarmed around him not so much because his case was of historical interest as because they perceived him as, and therefore helped to turn him into, some sort of existential gunslinger who was off to a shooting match with Mr. Death.

And yet, for all the sleaziness of the characters, I read the book with fascination from beginning to end. For one thing, instead of asking us simply to behold Gilmore, Mailer suddenly poses a series of questions that far transcend the puniness of his protagonist. First, what did Gilmore really do? Next, how did he go about doing it? Then, why did he do it? Then, was it right to execute him for what he did, and, almost as important, what was it like to execute him for what he did?

And finally, how did we learn of what he did, and was it right to learn in such a way? For in the second half of the book Gilmore shares central stage with Lawrence Schiller, the reporter — one colleague once called him a "carrion bird" — who succeeded by sweat and connivance in tying up the rights to Gilmore's and Miss Baker's stories, and eventually hired Mailer to write The Executioner's Song. Schiller is a good deal more interesting than Gilmore, though not without a certain repugnance of his own.

But even more enthralling than the questions Mailer teases us with is the technique he employs to do it. He tells his entire story in the voices of the various people who supplied the eyewitness accounts of Gilmore's life and death, and no more than a dozen times in the book's thousand pages does he let his own voice slip in: " 'Yes, the memory of one's life might be one's best and only friend,' Gilmore's mother thinks at one point, sounding a bit like old Aquarius."

Of course, the selection and ordering of the voices was done by Mailer, which is why, in his Afterword, he insists on calling the book "a true-life novel." But the absence of his normally overwhelming personality, combined with the homespun flatness of the voices that take his place, creates a heightened interest in what he is really up to, what he really thinks, and forces us thereby to pay unusually close attention to the text. It is almost as if by withdrawing himself he has permitted his subject more life.

What is Mailer really up to? What does he really think? Well, he may call The Executioner's Song a novel, but its most interesting achievement is to have provided a stunningly candid report on the complex, ambiguous and often-disturbing relationship that increasingly exists among the news, the news makers, and the reporters. If Gilmore had been ignored by people like Schiller, would he have gone through with his demand to die? This is a question that Mailer's book raises, whether it intended to or not.

As for what Mailer really thinks, it is difficult to say. For every important question he raises, he supplies as many answers as there are philosophies. For example, as an explanation for why Gilmore needed to commit murder, I'm attracted to one reporter's nicely worked-out theory that he was secretly a child-molester who resorted to random murder so as to mask his true impulses from himself. And from what I know of Mailer, I suspect he likes one doctor's existential-risk theory, with a touch of magic and the devil thrown in. Gilmore himself would say that he was made a murderer by a penal system designed to rehabilitate him, but then Gary always was a great kidder.

But no one theory takes precedence over any other, except in the eye of the beholder, just as the case against capital punishment, the tears of the executioners, for example, never prevail over the case in favor of it — the claim of the victims' families to be avenged — or vice versa. Which is the way things are in real life.

GILMORE . . . never an insight

Pat Barclay

A teacher's idealism swallowed in outport

"Tomorrow is school and I'm sick to the heart thinking about it", by Don Sawyer. Douglas & McIntyre. $10.95.

Don Sawyer is a young American expatriate who now lives in Salmon Arm, but between 1970 and 1972 he and his wife Jan made their home in a Newfoundland outport, where they struggled to teach school. Don's qualifications for a teaching career were a degree in Communication Arts and "considerable background in Chinese philosophy and political science . . . not only had I never taught, I had never even had a class in education."

A job is a job, however, so the Sawyers set off from their Michigan home in their seven-year-old, two-cycle SAAB, not too buoyed by the only non-encyclopedic information they'd been able to uncover in their local public library — a 1949 National Geographic article "that presented Newfoundland as a society of human penguins."

The Sawyers' destination was Hoberly Cove, Don's fictitious name for an outport situated on the coast northeast of Gander. "The place is 10 years behind any other school in the district," the superintendent told them on their arrival in Gander. "I don't think you'll have much luck dragging it into the 20th century."

This prophecy turned out to be correct. The Sawyers lasted for two years and made many changes both in their students and in themselves, but when they left the community closed over their influence the way a stone, no matter how many ripples it has created, is swallowed up by a pool.

Or so Sawyer indicated in his Afterword to Tomorrow is school and I'm sick to the heart thinking about it. The book describes his personal and professional experiences during the two years. Well-written and sparkling with anecdotes, it is as entertaining to read as it is serious in intent.

In essence, Tomorrow is school . . . is an account of Yankee stubbornness and idealism in conflict with Newfie tenacity and fatalism. "I was bringing to classroom teaching a set of egalitarian ideals . . . (and) a belief that education should serve the community at large," writes Sawyer. He was met by a system that relied on a "slightly modified British curriculum" based on standard (and ancient U.S.) texts, final exams worth 50 per cent of the year's mark, and a failure rate of 80 per cent.

Schooling, which had traditionally been considered a frill in a self-sufficient, isolated fishing community, had not caught up with the fact that fishing had virtually vanished as an occupation, with nothing to take its place. In such a situation, concluded Sawyer, the last thing the community's young people needed was to be flunked out in grade eight. ("Does a person who comes out of school feeling that he is capable and successful, or a person who leaves feeling he is a failure and incompetent, stand a better chance of making it in (a competitive) society?")

Fortunately for Sawyer, his principal was prepared to give him his head. ("I truthfully think you're good for us.") Much of Tomorrow is school . . . is taken up with Sawyer's attempts to find his way into the subjects he was required to teach. He did it by such devices as bringing his comics collection to English classes for girls, who had grown up with such "strict sanctions governing their physical activity" that nearly half of them could not do a somersault. ("I had a hard time prancing and pirouetting across the floor to my home-recorded sound track music from '2001' before 15 or 20 girls, but it was good for them to see a man trying to interpret music, I figured, and anyway, it was kind of fun.")

Sawyer's approach was a hit with the kids and a red flag waved in the face of most of the other teachers, so his experiences at school make lively reading. So do his and Jan's encounters with the community at large. ("One hour out of port and I was sick . . . For the rest of the day I hovered near death . . . I dismissed fishing as a possible future vocation.")

Tomorrow is school . . . holds much appeal for the general reader, but its proper audience is the teaching profession. Near the end of the book Sawyer justifies his creative but disruptive methods in a way that many will find convincing, but even those who could cheerfully boil him in oil will find his book worth their time because of its resourceful and discerning intelligence. Not surprisingly, Sawyer's subsequent career has been concerned with the education not only of young people, but of their teachers as well.

Jack Kerouac's painful odyssey

By WALTER KELLYTHORNE

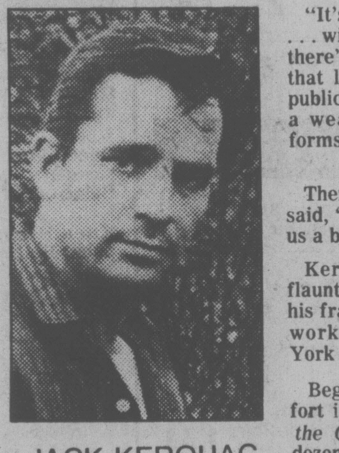
DESOLATE ANGEL: Jack Kerouac, the Beat Generation, and America, by Dennis McNally. Random House. $18.95.

When thousands of people gathered in Washington D.C. on October 15, 1969, to protest their government's war in Vietnam, they were in large part inspired — whether they knew it or not — by the ideas, passions and language of one Jean Luis Kerouac, the son of a French-Canadian Factory worker, his mother and an insurance salesman.

Five days later Jack Kerouac was dead, and it wasn't much longer after that before the energy that had animated the huge Washington crowd seemed just as dead — dissipated, anyway — into the strange forms of the seventies.

Kerouac, of course, had been investigating strange forms for the last 20 years or more.

Born in Lowell, Massachussetts, in 1922, Jack grew up first in the shadow of his brother Gerard, who died when Jack was five, and then in the shade of his mother's enormous love and dislike. After a brilliant, if brief, high school and college football career, Kerouac shipped out a couple of times in the wartime merchant marine. He wrote a novel, never published, called The Sea Is My Brother, read a lot of books, and discovered New York City. There he made the friends and mental connections that would serve him for the rest of his life.



JACK KEROUAC
. . . furtive

By 1948 Kerouac was clear enough about his own stance to articulate it this way to John Clellon Holmes:

"It's sort of furtiveness . . . with an inner knowledge there's no use flaunting on that level, the level of the public, a kind of beatness . . . a weariness with all the forms, all the conventions."

Then, laughing, Kerouac said, "I guess you could call us a beat generation."

Beginning with his first effort in 1950, The Town and the City, to his last some dozen years later, he poured out his knowledge in a wild stream of words that has never, anywhere, been equalled.

Ironically enough, by the time he became famous in 1957 with the publication of On The Road, a book he'd written years earlier, Kerouac was beginning his long painful odyssey of self-pity and drunkeness that would finally kill him.

He just wanted to be left alone to observe and write, and the adulation and abuse of his readers and critics was equally confusing and repulsive to this essentially modest and private man.

His modesty, Dennis McNally makes clear in this new biography, was born at least as much from his sense of guilt as from his perception of his worth.

A lifelong Catholic, Kerouac's sense of guilt was emphasized both by his brother's death and by his mother's reaction to it. She blamed Jack, and retreated into a lifelong bitterness that her son — financially and emotionally dependent on her, pledged to support her as soon as he was able — could never break.

Even when Jack discovered Buddhism, with its emphasis on the transitory nature of reality, he couldn't break the wheel of his life with his mother. Buddhism also emphasized the reality of suffering, and when Jack combined that with his native Catholicism, he fenced himself into a corner whose only outlet was death.

Jack Kerouac's life contained more than death, however, and so does Desolate Angel. Closely researched and energetically written, this volume is the best work yet about Jack Kerouac and the cultural phenomenons he inspired. Dennis McNally's observations on Kerouac's America do much to place the man and his work in a context that is still, regrettably, very much with us.

Terrorist shenanigans

By PAUL BENNETT

WILD JUSTICE, by Wilbur Smith. Collins. $14.95.

The massacre at the Munich Olympics, the hijacking of a jumbo jet to Idi Amin's Entebbe, and the slaughter of innocent civilians at several international airports are all still fresh in people's minds.

In Wild Justice, the 12th thrill-packed novel by South African-born, British-based writer Wilbur Smith, terrorism is projected as coming under the international direction of one evil mind who ultimately could control the destiny of the world.

The story starts out with a realistic hijacking of a plane full of the world's most eminent physicians and surgeons on the way home from a conference. The aircraft is forced to land — despite attempts to prevent it by the South African government — at Jan Smuts airport.

Here, the Action Commando for Human Rights, led by a beautiful German-trained American women, makes demands that in effect require the apartheid regime to repudiate itself.

Enter Peter Stride, brilliant and tough British military man who has been sidelined from command of a new international anti-terrorist organization to head the British strike force.

No pressure to change school smoking ban

His anti-smoking stance or Parkland Secondary School's 800 students applies to second offenders caught smoking on school property or in a situation where Lott feels there's a visible connection to the school.

A first offence brings a warning and letter to parents.

A second gives a two-day suspension with letters to both parents and the district superintendent.

A third gives five days suspension, letter and an interview between parents and school authorities.

"There is nothing in the area of discipline where you don't have some soul-searching. It's unfortunate that smoking has been identified. One might get the impression that it's the only disciplinary problem we encounter."

So far only two parents have challenged the rules, both with 16-year-old girls who smoke.

Lott said his interpretation of the School Act extends his responsibility to students no matter where they are if they are involved with a school function and the image of the school is in jeopardy.

School board chairman Lois Walsh said students are subject to school discipline from the moment they leave home to the moment they arrive back from school, according to the Public Schools Act.

The board checked up on one parents' complaint that Lott exceeded his authority in suspending a girl for smoking in the street near Parkland, and ruled in support of the principal.

Lott said he will keep his rules until a majority of staff, parents and students say they want them changed.

A survey of secondary schools in Greater Victoria School District indicates general support for anti-smoking rules, which vary according to circumstances and the principal's discretion.

The general rule is that there can be no smoking in school buildings or on schoolgrounds. Some schools depart slightly by designating smoking areas on schoolgrounds.

"I'm not going to follow students home to see if they smoke," Bickmore said.

He said he has never suspended anyone for smoking. First offenders are warned and after that parents are contacted.

About 50 or 60 students use a part of the school parking lot set aside for smokers in an experiment this year at Mt. Douglas, says principal Reg Reid.

If they abuse it they will probably lose it, he said.

He said he feels extending school authority beyond the schoolground puts too much responsibility on teachers.

At Oak Bay, the school boundaries are the limits and the designated smoking area is the public street.

$300 awarded for holiday woes

Judge D.K. McAdam Friday awarded $300 and interest to a woman for what was described as a disastrous 1978 trip to Spain.

The suit stemmed from an art and historical tour which ran into a civilian upheaval and ended two days earlier than scheduled with a hurried plane trip out of Spain.

McAdam said that the group of 30 which set out on the tour arranged through the Women's Committee of the Victoria Art Gallery was entitled to see most of the things on the itinerary provided by Traveleyden.

During testimony, it was alleged that the group only saw 26 of 62 historical monuments and sites listed.

The judge also stated that the complainant was put to some expense when the tour ended two days ahead of schedule and was only partially compensated.

Mrs. Muir, who paid $1,801 for the tour package, had sought $1,000 general damages and $14 court costs, claiming "frustration, distress and lack of enjoyment" brought on by the trip.

In her written brief, she said Traveleyden failed to research the trip adequately, resulting in an ill-conceived itinerary.

In a brief to the Greater Victoria school board's education committee, the Greater Victoria Teachers Association says teachers should be consulted more in the way schools are staffed and the ways resources are used and programs set up.

The 15-page brief says changes in society in recent decades have put new demands on schools and recommends greater use of in-school workshops to ensure continuous communication within school communities.

It suggests a joint association and school board committee should be established to explore the problems and develop broad policies dealing with re-training, curricula and planning.

The brief says every school should have daily access to teacher-librarians and urges implementation of the McMath report which recommended that 75 per cent of education costs be borne by the province.

Monday symphony has sold-out sign

The first pair of concerts to be conducted by Paul Freeman as the new conductor of the Victoria Symphony Orchestra will have a pre-sold-out audience at the Royal Theatre for Monday night's performance and a more than three-quarters capacity audience Sunday afternoon.

The excellent pre-season sale may well be the best on record although a complete check of the 38 years of the orchestra's existence has not been made.

Acclaimed Vienna-born pianist Anton Kuerti will be the guest artist. A child prodigy, he was brought to the United States early in life and at the age of 11 performed the Grieg concerto with Arthur Fiedler. Later he chose to make Canada the home base from which he has toured widely in Europe as well as doing extensive North American performances.

He will perform the Ballade for Piano and Orchestra Op.19 by Gabriel Faure. This lyrical product of the composer's early period was rejected by Franz Liszt as too difficult, but the composer himself performed it in Paris in 1881. The pianist will also play Mendelssohn's melodic Concerto No.1 in G minor.

When he appeared in the Symphony's "Year of the Maestros," Freeman brought his audience to their feet in a solid ovation following the performance of Rachmaninoff's second symphony. His programming of the luscious and stirring Tchaikowsky Symphony No.4 in F minor for this weekend is something to be eagerly anticipated.

Freeman has made more than 40 recordings and conducted a great number of orchestras including the London Symphony, New York Philharmonic and many other of the world's major ensembles.

Fire in press

The fire, caused by a short in an electrical cable, was quickly doused by employees. Damage was minimal.

Blood supply crisis eases

Blood supplies in Victoria and Vancouver should improve for the balance of the year after a summer of crisis, provincial Red Cross medical director Dr. Terence Stout said Friday.

"Supplies were low in August and early September."

There were two problems, delays in federal funding and a shortage of donors during the holiday months.

The money problem is being sorted out with Ottawa in talks still under way and the early indications are that sufficient funding will be available.

"The supply of blood should be adequate, although not plentiful, during the remainder of this year," Stout said.

The news brought a sigh of relief in Victoria which has a higher-than-average per capita need, due to the open heart surgery ward at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Local co-ordinator Gerry Savage said there were indications Victoria would lose five blood clinic days because of a reduction in federal funding. The status of these clinics remains uncertain.

Victoria had been concerned about low turnouts over the summer when many people were out of town on holidays.

Concern has also been expressed in Kelowna where the hospital board protested to Ottawa about curtailment of funding for blood donor clinics.

The board said the blood shortage this summer had resulted in delays for operations.

Patients sometimes had to spend an extra day or two in hospital awaiting a new supply, signficantly adding to costs. A few cents saved on blood drives was costing dollars at the hospital level.

CDC investment queried

VANCOUVER (CP) — An announcement that the Canada Development Corp. plans a major investment in Canada's fish processing industry drew a mixed reaction from British Columbia fishing industry representatives Thursday.

"I have difficulty in understanding how this investment will help Canadian companies," said Barry McMillan, president of J. S. McMillan Fisheries Ltd. and chairman of the B.C. Fisheries Association.

"The B.C. fishing industry is already over-capitalized. We have more than adequate facilities to handle all the fish that's caught.

"It would make more sense to direct the money to the east coast. We certainly don't need more capital infusion — that's been our problem."

CDC president Anthony Hampson told a news conference in Winnipeg that the Crown corporation is prepared to invest up to $150 million to acquire a major stake in Canada's fishing industry.

He said the industry is going to need a lot of capital and a new market thrust for Canada to capitalize on the 200-mile fishing limit off both coasts.

Hampson also said he is concerned about Japanese companies investing heavily in the B.C. fishing industry to gain access to Canadian waters and develop fish supplies.

McMillan said that in the last 10 years both levels of government have invested more money in B.C.'s fishing industry than the Japanese.

The government should establish clear guidelines by which fishing companies can operate and companies that are not economic should be allowed to go under, he said.

Bill Procopation, business agent for the United Fishermen and Allied Workers' Union, said his union is concerned about foreign control of the industry and feels the government should become more involved in developing exports markets.

Rifle butt slayer gets life

VANCOUVER (CP) — A man was sentenced to life imprisonment Friday in British Columbia Supreme Court for the slaying of a prostitute who was beaten to death with a rifle butt.

Justice A. B. Macfarlane imposed the automatic sentence of life imprisonment on Richard Wells, 32, convicted by a jury of the second-degree murder of Maryvida Leggatt, whose body was found by police Oct. 18, 1978, in an east end apartment.

He ruled that Wells would serve the minimum 10 years before being eligible for parole. The jury was told that Wells and a friend, Edward Box, had agreed to pay the girl $100 for both of them and took her to the apartment.

Box testified that he was in the toilet, and when he came out found Wells in the act of beating the girl.

Policewoman Leslie Helen Hallett testified that when she and another constable answered a radio call to the apartment, Wells opened the door clad in a towel, and when they tried to enter he asked if they had a search warrant.

She said she told Wells they didn't need a search warrant, and when he moved to close the door, brushed past him and saw the body of a female on the floor of the living room, covered with a bedspread.

THE WAY IT WAS

Thirty years ago, Albert Sandrin won the 1949 U.S. Open. In doing so, he played all the leading U.S. players of the day: Evans, Santasiere, Bisguier, Hartleb, Porschel, Donovan and Krauss. In the tenth round, Sandrin encountered Philip LeCornu, then of Michigan. The encounter resulted in the Brilliancy Prize. Here it is:

A VISIT TO FORT WAYNE

On a recent visit to Fort Wayne, it seemed like old times again! One night I lectured, answered questions and demonstrated the Knight's Tour at the International Harvester Chess Club. The next evening I played simultaneous blindfold.

Wrong-way bill protested

EDMONTON (CP) — Farmers should not have to pay for rerouting 14,000 tonnes of wrongly-shipped No. 3 wheat from Prince Rupert to Vancouver, Bill Dascavich, vice-president of the National Farmers Union, said Friday.

Dascavich said in a prepared statement the grain company responsible for shipping the wrong grade of wheat should bear the cost of the transfer.

"A grain-buying company should be able to tell the difference between No. 2 and No. 3 wheat," he said. "Regardless whether the shipment to Prince Rupert was a deliberate attempt to slip by the grain inspectors or an error, additional costs arising from the shipment are clearly the responbsibility of the shipper."

The No. 3 wheat was rejected by government grain inspectors at Prince Rupert where No. 2 wheat was needed to fill an order for the Soviet Union.

The unwanted No. 3 wheat tied up rail grain cars and caused loading delays before it was decided to divert the wheat to Vancouver, which has greater storage capacity.

Satellite chief dies

OTTAWA (CP) — John Chapman, the driving force behind Canadian satellite programs for the last 20 years, died Friday morning in Vancouver of an apparent heart attack.

Chapman, who was 58, guided Canada's entry into space by way of the Alouette and ISIS satellites.

Crash papers missing

CALGARY (CP) — An RCMP search for some 500 missing government documents dealing with last year's crash of a Pacific Western Airlines Boeing 737 at Cranbrook has not yet involved the airline's corporate head offices here, a spokeman said Friday.

Brian Johnson, PWA public relations director, said it is very unlikely information contained in any of the missing transport ministry documents are here since all PWA crash documentation is being held by the company's Toronto lawyer.

William Hobson, federal justice department regional director in Vancouver, said earlier the documents went missing sometime between February, 1978, the time of the crash, and August of this year.

They will be needed in a suit filed by in Federal Court by PWA against the federal government and its transport department over flight regulations, against Boeing Aircraft Co. and against Rohr Industries Inc. of California, which made the thrust reverser whose failure is suspected to have caused the crash.

The airliner went down when it tried to abort a landing after a snowplow was seen on the runway. The crash claimed 43 lives and PWA is claiming damages that may result from suits filed against it by survivors and relatives of those killed.

Hobson said he does not know what the missing documents contain or whether anything important was lost. He said other sources, perhaps PWA or the coroner, may have the missing information contained in their own documents.

Transport ministry official Charles Pratt speculated the documents may have been recycled and tapes erased due to a federal directive on waste and re-use of materials.

Police misinterpret bylaw

RED DEER (CP) — Red Deer city police may have entered private residences without search warrants or proper authority because of a mistaken belief a city bylaw allows it.

City RCMP Inspector Cec Coutts said he was unsure whether police made any arrests under the one-year-old noise bylaw.

But he said a few warnings were made under the bylaw, adding that he believed the bylaw gave police court authority to enter a dwelling and "make an arrest if a person is found committing an offence."

Chief Crown prosecutor Nick Riebeek said the city bylaw doesn't give authority to enter a dwelling without a warrant.

Municipal bylaws allowing search authority can be passed under the Municipal Government Act, Riebeek said. But the authority must be specifically laid out in the bylaw.

Assistant city clerk Gary Becknold said there is no reference to entering a dwelling without a warrant in Red Deer's noise bylaw.

Meanwhile, in Sylvan Lake, Alta. — where the town council this year passed a bylaw allowing police to enter homes and properties without a warrant to deal with noisemaking, such as raucous parties — local RCMP say they haven't yet used it.

Spivak appointed

WINNIPEG (CP) — Sidney Spivak, who resigned from the Manitoba cabinet to make an unsuccessful bid for Parliament, has been named to the University of Manitoba board of governors.

Education Minister Keith Cosens said Spivak, a 1951 law graduate of the university, will complete the unexpired term of David Orlikow, NDP member of parliament for Winnipeg North, who resigned in protest from the unpaid position, saying the board did not give enough preference to Canadians in hiring teaching staff.

Like their time

KINDERSLEY, Sask. (CP) — Mountain Time has been rejected in three western Saskatchewan time-option areas.

Residents of the Kindersley, Leader and Paynton districts voted to remain, with most of the province, on Central Time. The votes are binding for three years.

Mayor hopeful

CALGARY (CP) — Mayor Ross Alger has abandoned his efforts to get provincial aid for the city's proposed civic centre, but he still hopes the Lougheed government will lend a hand in redeveloping the rundown east end of downtown.

Alger said it had become clear to him "this is not the time to approach the government for direct funding." But he said in an interview there appeared to be a prospect the province would help in land assembly outside the five-block civic centre area.

The $234-million centre, the subject of a plebiscite to be held Nov. 28, has been touted by the mayor as a catalyst in development of the east end.

Sask. interested

PRINCE ALBERT (CP) — Saskatchewan Mineral Resources Minister Jack Messer said Friday the provincial government is interested in acquiring the federal Crown corporation Eldorado Nuclear Ltd. — one of several federal Crown corporations that may be sold — but "I don't know if we're eligible."

At a news conference in Ottawa earlier in the day, Treasury Board President Sinclair Stevens said he felt it was unlikely a federal Crown corporation will be sold outright to a provincial government.

Guilty of assault

CALGARY (CP) — Reginald Horton, a 12-year veteran of the Calgary police department, was found guilty this week of assaulting a handcuffed prisoner.

Provincial judge G.W. Clozza fined Horton $200 after noting that the policeman kicked, punched and slammed a prisoner into a wall after he had been told to stop by a staff sergeant.

Beautiful nurse

EDMONTON (CP) — Angela Bilawey, a 23-year-old psychiatric nurse and model, has won the title of Miss Edmonton on her second try Wednesday and will compete in the Miss Canada pageant in Toronto Nov. 5.

However, she may not be too busy. Miss Edmonton 1979, Linda Bochon, said her year had been "nourishing and gratifying," but there had been surprisingly little call for her to participate in public functions.

Alta. 'tight-wads' on Indians

BANFF, Alta. (CP) — The Alberta government was criticized Thursday for its lack of action programs for natives.

Dick Saunders, a consultant with the Indian Association of Alberta, told an Indian workshop the government is "stubborn, pig-headed, obstinate and damn stupid."

Addressing about 150 delegates from Alberta and Saskatchewan on the issue of economic development for natives, Saunders said the provincial and federal governments are "tight-wads" when it comes to funding programs for natives.

"They don't set up viable funding. All they do is one-shot quickie affairs."

He said one way to ensure economic development on the reserves is to start trusting the private sector and aid the private sector to trust natives.

"Companies are leery of these arrangements but affirmative action programs would change this," he said.

Saunders said the natives may have to sell themselves to achieve economic development.

"You are going to have to go to the private sector, the bureaucrats, the average Canadian and the media, and tell them you don't wants handouts, that you want to run your own show."

Insulation fails tests

TORONTO (CP) — The federal government has told nine insulation manufacturers that their cellulose-fibre products failed combustion tests and will no longer be approved for use on government-financed projects.

Robert Couillard, a Canada Mortgage and Housing Corp. spokesman, said Friday that CMHC decided early last week that the insulation did not meet federal government standards.

Test results submitted several weeks ago by the Ontario Research Foundation, a private firm, showed that the insulation manufactured by the nine firms failed the smoldering-combustion test.

Couillard said this means the insulation made by the nine firms can no longer be used in construction financed under the National Housing Act under which most low-income housing is built.

The nine firms are: Harmony Insulation, New Hamburg, Ont.; Canadian Cellulose, Edmonton; Global Insulating Systems, Ottawa; Weathercheck Insulation, Concord, Ont.; Global Insulation Systems, Toronto; P.N.W. Fibre-tex, Langley, B.C.; Climatizer, Toronto; Canada Comfort, Putnam, Ont.; Weatherproof, Mississauga, Ont.

Accused killer at graveside

EDMONTON (CP) — Under police guard Mrs. Lovey Sitko, 32, left Alberta Hospital Friday to attend the funeral and graveside prayers for her four children she is accused of murdering.

Mrs. Lovey has been charged with the deaths and was remanded to hospital for 30 days for psychiatric evaulation.

After the mass, mourners filed past the open coffins where Laura, 11, wore a T-shirt from her baseball team; Larry, 9, wore a Maple Leafs T-shirt; and Jody, 4, had on an Edmonton Eskimos T-shirt. Baby Jamie wore a suit.

UIC handouts drop 8%

OTTAWA (CP) — There was an eight-per-cent drop in unemployment insurance benefits paid during the first seven months of the year compared with the correstonding period last year.

Federal statistics released Friday showed $2.74 billion in benefits have been paid this year compared with $2.98 billion for the correslonding seven months of 1978.

By the end of July, the government had 813,000 beneficiaries of the unemployment insurance program on its files compared with 895,000 by the end of the previous July.

‘Flying coffin’ probed

LONDON (AP) — Aviation officials puzzled Friday over the riddle of a million-dollar plane whose crew of two lay slumped at the controls while their plane drifted for seven hours in circles of doom across busy international air lanes.

It crashed in France instead of landing in Britain, killing both men and starting what British newspapers called the “flying coffin mystery.

The plane took off from Stansted Airport, 65 kilometres northeast of London, on Tuesday and when it failed to make its scheduled 4 p.m. landing at Exeter, in the west of England, the alarm was raised.

Radio calls to the plane went unanswered.

British Royal Air Force and French Air Force jets flew close alongside and reported seeing the two men aboard motionless at the controls. However, there was nothing they could do to aid the two men.

Traffic controllers on both sides of the channel warned other aircraft and monitored the plane.

Killed were Tom Lampitt, 48, a top British pilot, and Capt. Fausto Aguiar de Barros Zella of Portugal. Lampitt was demonstrating the plane and giving instruction in its high-altitude capabilities.

A veteran British government engineering inspector, Les Shaddic, was taking part in the official French inquiry into the crash, which occurred after the plane, believed to have been on automatic pilot, ran out of fuel over Brittany.

He declined to comment on speculation that the two men may have lost consciousness because of a loss of oxygen.

$4.8 million hair suit

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Federal Trade Commission announced Friday it has sued a hair implant company to obtain $4.8 million in refunds for former customers who suffered pain, infections, scars and hair loss.

The refunds would go to 2,000 people across the country who, starting in 1976, underwent implants costing $2,500 each and performed by the Cleveland-based United Laboratories of America Inc. and its offices in several states.

Howard Ronick, a lawyer in the FTC’s Atlanta office who is handling the case, said it marks the first time the agency has gone directly to court seeking monetary redress for injured consumers, thus avoiding the commission’s often lengthy administrative proceedings.

If the court orders the refunds, it could establish a predecent that will enable the commission to move quickly.

In a suit filed in U.S. District Court for the Northern District of Ohio, the FTC charged that “many customers suffer severe pain, serious infections, extensive scarring and other medical complications” as a result of the process.

The implants involved inserting into the scalp “synthetic or natural fibres or filaments intended to stimulate hair,” the suit said.

Experts who have studied those kinds of techniques, the suit said, have found “that such processes are generally ineffective as a method for treating baldness because the implanted fibres ordinarily fall out.

Teddy all but says yes

BOSTON (UPI) — Sen. Edward Kennedy has all but announced for the presidency, telling cheering supporters they won’t be disappointed by his decision on whether he will challenge President Carter next year.

Kennedy came home Friday to a highly partisan state AFL-CIO convention that shouted unanimous approval of a resolution endorsing him for president.

Punching the air with a clenched fist, Kennedy shouted his response: “You’ll be hearing about my response to that resolution in the not too many . . . weeks to come and I don’t think you’ll be disappointed.

That response sent union delegates climbing on top of the tables in the convention hall chanting, “We want Teddy. We want Teddy.”

Kennedy Friday also launched his strongest criticism to date of Carter — blaming his administration for high gasoline and heating oil prices, and made conservative speeches on both the economy and crime.

THERMOGRAPHY DISPLAY

Harbour Square Mall
October 3 to 13

B.C. Hydro will repeat the display of thermograms produced from the fly-over of Victoria in November 1978 at Harbour Square shopping mall, lower level, 910 Government Street, during regular mall hours from October 3 to 13 inclusive.

In addition to the thermogram displays there will be a model 14-foot by 20-foot insulated house, and heat loss information will be available for those not included in the fly-over area (north to Royal Oak Drive and west to View Royal).

B.C. Hydro representatives will be on hand to provide literature and information and interpret the thermograms.

There will also be a computer terminal at the display to offer on-the-spot assistance in beating the high cost of heating. If you would like a quick printout of your home’s insulation needs (including how long the additional insulation will take to pay for itself) bring along the following information — 1) your total home area in square feet, 2) number of inches of present wall and ceiling insulation. An operator will feed it into the computer and you’ll have an answer while you’re there.

Pope met by million

One-third of Ireland jams park

DUBLIN (AP) — Pope John Paul, beckoned by "the voice of the Irish calling to me," opened a pastoral tour of this island of faith and bloody strife by celebrating mass today before an estimated at more than one million worshippers on the vast green of Dublin's Phoenix Park.

It was the largest gathering in Irish history — equal to one-third of the country's total population. Many in the throng wept openly.

"You come as a messenger of peace to a troubled land," Cardinal Tomas Cardinal O Fiaich of Ireland told the pontiff on his arrival from Rome.

The Pope himslf made an impassioned appeal for peace in Northern Ireland.

"On my knees, I beg you to turn away from the paths of violence," the pontiff pleaded of terrorists on both sides of Ireland's sectarian divide.

The speech, prepared for delivery in Drogheda, was his strongest statement yet on Northern Ireland and the sectarian hatreds that have plagued Ireland for centuries.

In his speech, the Pope spoke particularly to Northern Protestants hostile to his visit.

"May no Irish Protestant think that the Pope is an enemy, a danger or a threat," he said. "My desire is that instead Protestants would see in me a friend and a brother in Christ."

"I appeal to young people who may have become caught up in organizations engaged in violence. I say to you, with all the love I have for you, with all the trust I have in young people: do not listen to voices which speak the language of hatred, revenge, retaliation."

On the flight from Rome, the Pope was asked whether he might, as Protestant leaders in Northern Ireland demand, excommunicate Irish Republican Army terrorists from the church.

In his homily in Dublin, delivered in English under bright, clear skies as he stood before a 37-metre steel cross painted in the Vatican's yellow and white colors, he described himself as a pilgrim with a message of peace, and told the multitude he was "living a moment of tense emotion.

"Like St. Patrick, I too have heard the voice of the Irish calling to me, and so I have come to you," he said.

The sermon was primarily a tribute to the "inviolable and unbreakable" loyalty of Irish Catholics to the church in Rome, and an appeal to them to meet the challenge of "pervading materialism."

"You Irish Catholics have kept and loved the unity and peace of the Catholic Church, treasuring it above all earthly treasure," he said.

He called himself "a pilgrim for Christ to the land from which so many pilgrims for Christ . . . went out over Europe, the Americas, Australia, Africa, Asia."

The 59-year-old John Paul, who will leave Ireland Monday to begin a week-long tour of the United States, is the first pope ever to visit this overwhelmingly Catholic country.

$2 oil hike next week?

KUWAIT (AP) — A Kuwait newspaper says Arab oil producers on the Persian Gulf will raise petroleum prices next week by an average of 10 per cent, adding about $2 to current levels.

The daily Al Siyassa cited unamed oil industry sources, who also said the price for spot sales was up sharply in European and Japanese markets, reaching $35 U.S. a barrel for heavy crude oil and $45 U.S. a barrel for light crude.

Members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, including the Persian Gulf Arab states, in June raised the base price of crude oil from $14.55 to as high as $18 a barrel, depending on the quality.

The paper said the producers decided to raise prices again because of diminishing Iranian production and the failure of the major oil importing countries to adopt efficient energy conservation measures.

The June decision by OPEC allowed individual producers to add surcharges and differentials to raise prices to a ceiling of $23.50 a barrel. The increase is to be in effect until the end of the year.

It was not immediately clear if the latest reported price rise includes Saudi Arabia, the world's largest petroleum exporter which supplies the U.S. with 20 per cent of its imported oil.

Rebel dentist faces the boot

VANCOUVER (CP) — The council of the College of Dental Surgeons of British Columbia has voted to hold a court of inquiry to determine if its rebel treasurer has committed unethical, infamous or unprofessional acts.

The motion came during a regular council meeting Friday after Dr. Murray Bloom refused to resign as treasurer or submit to a referendum of the membership.

During the stormy meeting at a local hotel shouting could be heard from behind the closed doors.

In an interview after the meeting, Bloom said he plans to take the council to court to get a decision supporting his interpretation of a section of the Dentistry Act outlining the treasurer's duties.

Bloom, who has been a vocal critic of payments made to the college's elected officials, said he refused to resign after a majority vote by the 27-member council because he has the support of the college membership.

Reading from a council statement, college president Dr. Ted Ramage said a major portion of the meeting was devoted to a review of Bloom's actions including his recent airing of college business in the media.

"Motions of censure were received from the (college's) component societies condemning his actions in bypassing the regular processes of the college council and impairing the behavior of council members and staff," Ramage said.

He said the council has asked its lawyer to draft revisions of the Dentistry Act to allow impeachment of any council member.

The controversy began last month when Bloom said he was being ostracized by other members of the college executive because of information he gleaned from the organization's books about what he considers to be questionable payments to elected officials.

He says a past president of the college received almost $100,000 for about two years' work, a figure he feels is excessive.

'He was best mailman in all of Canada'

By DEREK SIDENIUS

As a mailman, Dave Slater was in a class all by himself.

Ask his fellow workers at Station B.

Ask the residents of Joan Crescent, Craigdarroch and Rockland to whom he delivered the mail over the past 22 years.

"He was the best mailman in all of Canada," claims Mabel Snowden, 1385 Craigdarroch.

There are few around who'd disagree.

Normally such events go unnoticed in the community.

But if you thought that would happen in Slater's case, you obviously don't know his former customers . . . or Slater.

The folks Slater served wanted to do something special for him and so on Friday night 24 of them gathered at the home of Sylvia Lyle, 960 Joan Crescent, for a surprise party in his honor.

They presented him with a watch and a framed dedication made by Donald Harvey which read: "Dave Slater: We would like to thank you for the many years of dedicated service. We thank you too for your ever-present good cheer. We wish you and Mrs. Slater a long and happy life."

To his many customers Slater was more than postman — he was a friend, almost a member of the family.

"Most people wait for the mail to come," said Roy Temple of 1007 Joan Crescent. "But we'd wait for the mailman."

Slater stopped and talked to everybody as he went on his rounds. He knew the young and the old. He laughed with them and at times cried with them.

It was perhaps the little things he did that won him such wide respect.

Mrs. Lyle recalls one day she was struggling with a heavy machine aeriating her lawn when Dave passed by. He doffed his cap, dropped his mailbag and spent half an hour finishing the job for her.

Slater saw him. "You shouldn't be doing that," he said and taking off his coat went up the tree and sawed off the limb.

One time a relief carrier was on the route when an elderly lady came out of her house.

"Oh, I guess you'll do then," she said and turned her back for the startled carrier to zip up her dress.

"Dave had the sense of the real, original Everyman," said long-time customer Don Harvey of 1025 Joan. "He was something we'd all love to be.

"It wasn't what he did so much as that he did it so damn well."

"He was the epitome of what a postman should be."

Castro levels blast at Carter

Times News Services

As President Carter prepares to address the American people on the thorny subject of Soviet troops in Cuba, the United States faced a scathing verbal attack from Havana and Moscow for its handling of the crisis.

Cuban President Fidel Castro accused President Carter of being "dishonest, immoral and insincere" and claimed he has created "an artificial crisis" over the presence of Soviet troops in Cuba, the Cuban news agency reported.

And a top Soviet official indicated the crisis had raised so "many doubts" about the Carter administration that Moscow was approaching a point where it may no longer be able to work with the White House on major international issues.

The Soviet troops are part of a "military instruction centre installed in Cuba 17 years ago, and both the CIA and former U.S. administrations knew it," Castro declared Friday in his first public rebuttal to U.S. criticism of the stationing of Soviet combat troops on the Caribbean island.

"What you call a brigade, which we call a training centre, has been in Cuba for the past 17 years," Castro insisted at a news conference in Havana.

"That military facility was established at the end of the October crisis in 1962 in conformity with the spirit of the agreement signed that year.

"This facility was known and is known by all the presidents who have gone through the United States. This facility was known to the CIA. This facility was known by President Kennedy. This facility was known by President Johnson. This facility was known by President Nixon and by President Ford. And President Carter had to necessarily know about it," Castro was quoted as saying.

It was "no secret whatsoever," the Cuban leader said.

"Why is this being brought up now, creating an artificial crisis? Carter has to answer this . . . and the fact that he is in a crisis does not give him the right to put world peace in a crisis," Castro said in an apparent reference to Carter's political troubles at home.

In an exclusive interview with The Washington Post in Moscow, Georgi Arbatov, alternate member of the Soviet Central Committee and adviser to President Leonid Brezhnev, made it clear the Soviet Union has no inclination to make any move of its own that would resolve the "fabricated issue" of Soviet combat troops in Cuba.

Arbatov gave the interview on grounds that he be quoted solely as head of Moscow's Institute on the U.S.A. and Canada, the main American affairs think-tank, and not as a government official. However, it is unlikely that Arbatov could speak independently given the nature of the Soviet system.

Meanwhile, Carter was meeting with his aides today and working on Monday's address to the country on his attempts to get the Soviet Union to "end the combat capability" of its brigade in Cuba.

It is an address that could weigh heavily on the fate of the strategic arms limitation treaty now before the Senate.

By AB KENT

Canadian researchers will toil on a frozen sea in darkest December to help initiate what could become an Arctic ice forecasting program.

Scientists from the Institute of Ocean Sciences at Patricia Bay expect to participate in the program.

The project is a joint undertaking of the federal Atmospheric Environment Service, a private contractor and two Calgary oil companies — Dome Petroleum and its subsidiary, Canmar Drilling.

Intera, also of Calgary, is the private contractor taking part in the offshore remote sensing project covering 100,000 square kilometres of the Beaufort Sea.

The AES will process data to build a regional computer model of the sea, attempting to predict ice conditions where oil drill ships, supply tenders and tankers may soon be operating.

Intera will extract similar data to build a computer model of a small scale area where equipment such as a drilling platform may be located.

Members of the frozen sea research group at the Institute of Ocean Sciences expect to be involved in developing the regional model with AES and also hope to run an oceanographic helicopter survey in conjunction with the December field work.

Dr. Lyn Lewis, head of the frozen sea group, said formation and movement of sea ice is not well understood.

Two medium size aircraft will be flown over the ice, each scanning with a different type of radar at an altitude of about 5,000 feet.

From the air, all ice looks the same, but on radar the images received and recorded for analysis will vary, telling scientists the difference between thin, first-year ice that ships might negotiate and thick, multi-year ice, to be avoided.

"If it works it will be a very valuable tool for these people working offshore," said Lewis.

Lewis said when it is considered that each offshore well costs about $40 million and the cost of the research project is around $1 million, the companies will be getting a bargain.

The oil companies, who will be bearing the brunt of the cost, will provide the recently acquired icebreaker Kigoriak as the base receiver for data transmitted from the aircraft.

Lewis said the SAR system is so refined that at high altitudes it can give an identifiable image for objects or earth features down to three metres in size.

Before the judge

Three members of the Bounty Hunters motorcycle club were granted bail Friday in Victoria provincial court.

Brock Douglas Flett, 32, of 840 Victoria, David Dean Krenbrink, 22, of 511 MacAuley, and Daniel David Purgaj, 20, of 965 Hillside, are jointly charged with two counts of assault causing bodily harm and one count each of unlawful confinement and possession of a shotgun dangerous to the public peace.

The trio were charged in connection with an incident Wednesday night which started out in Victoria and ended in Saanich in the 3500-block Quadra.

Judge Fred Green ordered the release of all three men on $4,000 recognizance but also required surety bail of $1,000 for Flett and Krenbrink.

All three men were remanded until Oct. 9 for election of their trial method.

* * *

Stephen Gregory Bell, of 517 Sumas, pleaded guilty to theft under $200.

Crown counsel Wayne Smith said a resident of a condominium apartment block at 929 Esquimalt heard noises in an underground parking lot on the afternoon of Sept. 12.

When she got there, Smith said, she saw two youths siphoning gasoline. She asked the pair to wait while police were called and they complied.

While waiting for the arrival of police, Smith added, they put the gasoline back in the vehicle from which they were stealing.

Green handed out the jail sentence after learning that Bell was convicted of theft over and under $200 Nov. 27, 1974 and theft under $200 May 2, 1977, both times receiving suspended sentences and a year's probation.

* * *

A 19-year-old Qualicum youth, Brian Earl Mitchell, elected trial by judge without jury on a charge of possession of morphine for the purpose of trafficking and a preliminary hearing date of March 3 was set.

Mitchell was also released on $1,500 recognizance with one surety or cash deposit of $500.

Pot traffickers jailed 30 days

Two former Hamilton men were sentenced in county court Friday to 30 days in jail for trafficking two quarter-ounce baggies of marijuana on Sept. 5 to an undercover policeman for $45.

Richard John Earl, 19, and Darrell Robert LaLonde, 20, pleaded guilty.

Judge Peter Millward said he wouldn't lecture them but it was their choice to be treated as criminals or as citizens.

Both men have criminal records. LaLonde has committed nine offences, including thefts, break-in, failure to appear in court, possession of stolen property and possession of marijuana. Earl has committed three offences — break-in and theft, robbery and being unlawfully at large.

In both cases, the first offence resulted in probation and subsequent offences drew jail terms.

Bail denied to 2 men held in drugs swoop

But the door was left open for defence counsel Patrick Sweeney to make a further application when Anderson also adjourned the matter.

If it comes up again, it will likely to be heard in Vancouver.

Denied bail and remaining in custody are Segiundo Quinomes-Landasuri, 34, and Severo Guerrero, 46, both from Buena Ventura, a coastal city 350 kilometres southwest of Bogota.

Details given during the bail application cannot be published because the defence has exercised its right to a ban on publication of the evidence given pending the county court trial.

The trial is not expected to be held until the spring or early summer, following a preliminary hearing in provincial court in November and December.

The two men are among 23 accused of conspiracy to import marijuana, importing marijuana and possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking.

All were arrested after police and armed forces swooped in May 22 on two vessels, the 51-metre freighter Samarkanda and the 16-metre Whitecap, in Sydney Inlet, 32 kilometres northwest of Tofino.

Police seized 640 100-pound bales of marijuana. All but a small portion kept for court purposes was burned in the North Cowichan municipal incinerator.

Gassing studied

LONDON (AP) — Under pressure from British animal lovers, Agriculture Minister Peter Walker has announced an investigation into the mass killing of badgers to protect cattle from the spread of TB. About 3,500 badgers have been killed with cyanide gas in southwestern England in the last four years.

Arctic ice scan program

By AB KENT

Canadian researchers will toil on a frozen sea in darkest December to help initiate what could become an Arctic ice forecasting program.

Scientists from the Institute of Ocean Sciences at Patricia Bay expect to participate in the program.

The project is a joint undertaking of the federal Atmospheric Environment Service, a private contractor and two Calgary oil companies — Dome Petroleum and its subsidiary, Canmar Drilling.

Intera, also of Calgary, is the private contractor taking part in the offshore remote sensing project covering 100,000 square kilometres of the Beaufort Sea.

The AES will process data to build a regional computer model of the sea, attempting to predict ice conditions where oil drill ships, supply tenders and tankers may soon be operating.

Intera will extract similar data to build a computer model of a small scale area where equipment such as a drilling platform may be located.

Members of the frozen sea research group at the Institute of Ocean Sciences expect to be involved in developing the regional model with AES and also hope to run an oceanographic helicopter survey in conjunction with the December field work.

Dr. Lyn Lewis, head of the frozen sea group, said formation and movement of sea ice is not well understood.

Two medium size aircraft will be flown over the ice, each scanning with a different type of radar at an altitude of about 5,000 feet.

From the air, all ice looks the same, but on radar the images received and recorded for analysis will vary, telling scientists the difference between thin, first-year ice that ships might negotiate and thick, multi-year ice, to be avoided.

"If it works it will be a very valuable tool for these people working offshore," said Lewis.

Lewis said when it is considered that each offshore well costs about $40 million and the cost of the research project is around $1 million, the companies will be getting a bargain.

The oil companies, who will be bearing the brunt of the cost, will provide the recently acquired icebreaker Kigoriak as the base receiver for data transmitted from the aircraft.

Lewis said the SAR system is so refined that at high altitudes it can give an identifiable image for objects or earth features down to three metres in size.

Before the judge

Three members of the Bounty Hunters motorcycle club were granted bail Friday in Victoria provincial court.

Brock Douglas Flett, 32, of 840 Victoria, David Dean Krenbrink, 22, of 511 MacAuley, and Daniel David Purgaj, 20, of 965 Hillside, are jointly charged with two counts of assault causing bodily harm and one count each of unlawful confinement and possession of a shotgun dangerous to the public peace.

The trio were charged in connection with an incident Wednesday night which started out in Victoria and ended in Saanich in the 3500-block Quadra.

Judge Fred Green ordered the release of all three men on $4,000 recognizance but also required surety bail of $1,000 for Flett and Krenbrink.

All three men were remanded until Oct. 9 for election of their trial method.

Crown counsel Wayne Smith said a resident of a condominium apartment block at 929 Esquimalt heard noises in an underground parking lot on the afternoon of Sept. 12.

When she got there, Smith said, she saw two youths siphoning gasoline. She asked the pair to wait while police were called and they complied.

Green handed out the jail sentence after learning that Bell was convicted of theft over and under $200 Nov. 27, 1974 and theft under $200 May 2, 1977, both times receiving suspended sentences and a year's probation.

A 19-year-old Qualicum youth, Brian Earl Mitchell, elected trial by judge without jury on a charge of possession of morphine for the purpose of trafficking and a preliminary hearing date of March 3 was set.

Mitchell was also released on $1,500 recognizance with one surety or cash deposit of $500.

Pot traffickers jailed 30 days

Two former Hamilton men were sentenced in county court Friday to 30 days in jail for trafficking two quarter-ounce baggies of marijuana on Sept. 5 to an undercover policeman for $45.

Richard John Earl, 19, and Darrell Robert LaLonde, 20, pleaded guilty.

Judge Peter Millward said he wouldn't lecture them but it was their choice to be treated as criminals or as citizens.

Both men have criminal records. LaLonde has committed nine offences, including thefts, break-in, failure to appear in court, possession of stolen property and possession of marijuana. Earl has committed three offences — break-in and theft, robbery and being unlawfully at large.

Bail denied to 2 men held in drugs swoop

But the door was left open for defence counsel Patrick Sweeney to make a further application when Anderson also adjourned the matter.

If it comes up again, it will likely to be heard in Vancouver.

Denied bail and remaining in custody are Segiundo Quinomes-Landasuri, 34, and Severo Guerrero, 46, both from Buena Ventura, a coastal city 350 kilometres southwest of Bogota.

Details given during the bail application cannot be published because the defence has exercised its right to a ban on publication of the evidence given pending the county court trial.

The trial is not expected to be held until the spring or early summer, following a preliminary hearing in provincial court in November and December.

The two men are among 23 accused of conspiracy to import marijuana, importing marijuana and possession of marijuana for the purpose of trafficking.

All were arrested after police and armed forces swooped in May 22 on two vessels, the 51-metre freighter Samarkanda and the 16-metre Whitecap, in Sydney Inlet, 32 kilometres northwest of Tofino.

Police seized 640 100-pound bales of marijuana. All but a small portion kept for court purposes was burned in the North Cowichan municipal incinerator.
